Carey cleans up after flash flood

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

CAREY — Residents of Carey and surrounding ranches faced costly clean-up and repairs Sunday.

But they were thankful that the flash flood had not caused any injuries, and they were hopeful that Gov. John Evans would help get the flood-damaged town declared a disaster area.

Residents, irrigation company officials and Bureau of Disaster Service representatives — sent to Carey by Evans — met Sunday night to review damage from the flash flood that hit the town about 11:30 p.m. Saturday, sweeping into about 25 homes.

Darrell Waller of the Bureau of Disaster Services, a state agency, told the property owners that if the federal government agrees to declare the community a disaster area, residents will be eligible for loans and other relief through the Farmers Home Administration and the Small Business Administration.

Evans, who was in Wendell and Twin Falls on Saturday night, flew Sunday to Hailey and then drove to Carey to inspect the damage. He then ordered the Bureau of Disaster Services team, headed by Waller, to Carey to render all possible assistane.

After returning to Boise, the governor said he would meet with the head of the National Guard this morning before deciding if he would issue a disaster proclamation for Carey and the surrounding ranches.

Two small earthen dams on a tributary to the Little Wood River, below the Little Wood Reservoir, gave way about 10 p.m. Saturday, sending about 400 acre-feet of water into the already bank-high river and canal systems.

According to area ranchers, the upper structure, known as the Albrethsen Dam, which holds about 400 acre-feet of water for irrigation use by the ranchers, gave way under the pressure of heavy spring run-off. This caused the second dam a short distance downstream to wash out. Because the lower structure, known as the old Howard Dam, had been condemned several years ago, its gates were open, but it still could not accommodate the sudden rush of water.

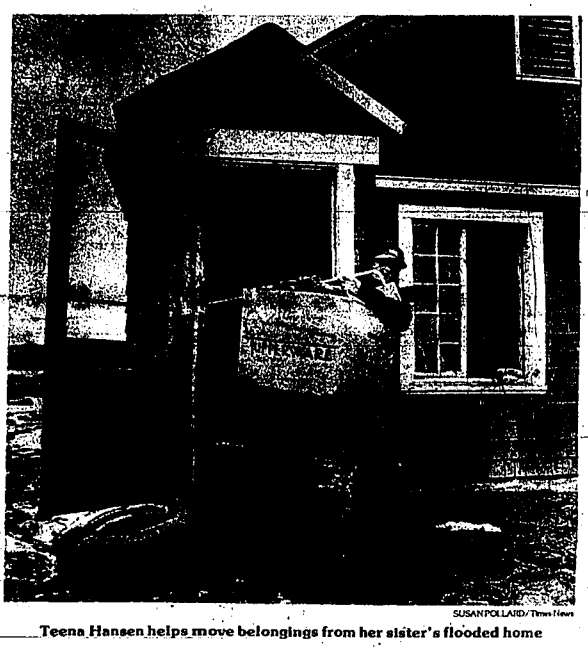

By 11:30 p.m., the residents of Carey, with a population of 500, were awakened by water pouring into their homes.

Blaine County Sheriff Dennis Haynes said most of the homes on the south side of town were flooded, some with extensive deposits of topsoil the water left behind.

County Commissioner Rupert House said Sunday afternoon that the danger of further flooding had subsided, at least for the present. The flood crested shortly after it hit, he said, and the water was diverted into the Little Wood River, Silver Creek and into the desert south of the town.

Topsoil was washed away in several fields, leaving bedrock exposed and wiping out any chance of grain or hay crops this year for some farmers.

Residents had little warning

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES

CAREY — Mary York, a Carey beautician who maintains a shop in her home, said she didn't know how to describe the flood that hit her little community Saturday night, leaving three feet of mud and water in her home.

"In furniture alone, I guess we lost about $4,000, but it's too early to even estimate what our final loss will be," she said Sunday evening.

The town had no warning, York said, until water from the Little Fish Creek poured in, bringing silt, debris and even some dead sheep with it.

"Lots of people were like us. They had gone to bed and didn't know the water had flooded the town until it was in their homes and yards," she said. "We were asleep, and some of our neighbors woke us. Our living room was already full of water."

York and her husband, Jack, live off Main Street in Carey. They were among a couple of dozen Carey families who suffered damage and loss when the earth-filled dam on the Little Fish Creek, just below Little Wood Reservoir, gave way about 10 p.m. Saturday.

The excessive spring run-off proved too much for the old dam, residents said, and when it washed out, the rush of water swept away another small earthen dam about a quarter of a mile downstream.

Lee Peterson and Jim Peterson, partners in a sheep ranching business but not related, suffered one of the heaviest losses. About 100 head of white-face ewes and lambs washed away and were drowned.

"It took everything," Lee Peterson said. "All of our lambing sheds, including one we just built with fiberglass roof, are just gone. I found part of one, but we don't even know where the rest went. There's no way we could salvage any of the buildings.

Federal probe looking into BPA pressure on power co-ops

By RON ZELLAR
Times-News writer

RUPERT — Proving whether the Bonneville Power Administration coerced local electrical cooperatives into participating in two defunct nuclear-power plants might be impossible, according to a federal investigator.

Bob Higgins, a supervisory auditor with the General Accounting Office, said in a telephone interview from Portland that he plans to conduct interviews beginning today with representatives of public power co-ops and municipalities in southern Idaho.

But Higgins said only lawyers and judges could determine with certainty whether the feeral government was in any way liable for the money spent on the two nuclear projects.

Rep. George Hansen, R-Idaho, requested the GAO probe to determine if the 88 utilities that participated in two Washington Public Power Supply System projects did so because the BPA, a federal agency, led them to believe their power needs could no longer be met after 1983.

Hansen said Thursday that he has received documents that, if substantiated, go a long way toward involving BPA in the decisions.

"If that's the case, I think BPA should shoulder some of the load," he said, referring to $7 billion in debts the participating utilities are obligated to pay.

Congress probably would not be inclined to "bail out" the utilities, Hansen said.

But if the BPA partially was responsible for initiating the plants, he said the agency might be ordered to bear a portion of the costs, whether from administrative funds, a congressional appropriation or higher rates charged customers throughout the region.

However, a newsletter issued last week by the Northwest Power Planning Council indicates the BPA might have no other source to turn to other than rate increases.

The article, in "Northwest Energy News," states congressional committees recently took BPA administrator Peter Johnson to task for allowing the agency to fall $687 million behind in payments to the federal government for construction of Columbia River hydroelectric dams.

Johnson reportedly answered that the BPA was requesting a 73 percent rate hike Oct. 1, and it would not be able to come up with the cash until then.

WPPSS directors canceled the two partially completed projects — funded by public power co-ops and municipalities — after new power forecasts for the Northwest indicated the power from the plants would not be needed before 1990, if then.

Burley power users form protest group

BURLEY — A group of public power customers in Burley has organized in an effort to keep the city from paying any additional bills from two defunct nuclear-power plants.

The unnamed group is circulating petitions in both Spanish and English, and it has called a public meeting for this Wednesday at 7 p.m. at Overland School to discuss its aims.

Madge Vallejo, one of the organizers, says low-income residents of the city cannot afford both the 73 percent rate increase being sought by the Bonneville Power Administration and the city's portion of $7 billion in bonds issued for the two plants by the Washington Public Power Supply System.

Burley was one of 88 public power districts that signed an obligation in 1976 to build two of the five nuclear-power projects managed by WPPSS, a consortium of 23 utilities in the state of Washington.

The projects collapsed last year after cost overruns and projections that the power would not be needed.

Connie Williams and Lola Hines, two other organizers, said in separate telephone interviews that the WPPSS debt could destroy the Burley economy.

British force retakes South Georgia

By United Press International

In the first military clash in the Falkland Islands dispute, helicopter-borne British troops backed by warships recaptured South Georgia island in the South Atlantic Sunday.

They took the island in a two-hour battle with 140 Argentine defenders.

In Washington, Argentine Foreign Minister Nicanor Costa Mendez told reporters Britain violated international law by having "used force and invaded our island" while negotiations were under way.

"I'm truly surprised that Britain attacked Georgia Island," Costa Mendez said, adding Argentina will press for sanctions against Britain at a meeting of the Organization of American States today.

He said in New York before the surrender that the attack on the submarine "technically" created a state of war with Britain, but added later "there is never an end to diplomacy."

Also in Washington, the State Department said Costa Mendez asked to postpone a meeting with Secretary of State Alexander Haig that had been scheduled for Sunday but said the two men had "lengthy conversations by telephone."

"The secretary will discuss the situation with the foreign minister tomorrow morning," the spokesman said but declined to specify if there would be a face-to-face meeting today.

In London, Defense Secretary John Nott said the British assault force suffered no casualties in capturing the South Georgia port of Grytviken. Helicopters earlier had crippled an Argentine submarine in the port.

"The Argentine forces offered only limited resistance to the British troops," Nott said in a statement read outside No. 10 Downing Street as Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher stood alongside. Nott said he had no information on Argentine casualties.

"Our forces were landed by helicopter and were supported by a number of warships together with a royal fleet auxiliary," Nott said.

The commander of the British fleet in the South Atlantic said in a message to London: "Be pleased to inform her majesty that the white ensign flies alongside the Union Jack in South Georgia. God save the queen."

Mrs. Thatcher said, "Let us rejoice at that news and congratulate our forces and the marines."

Nott said that before the landing British helicopters attacked an Argentine submarine in Grytviken.

Shortly before he announced the surrender, Nott said "all of us seek a peaceful solution. But South Georgia belongs to Britain and we mean to take it back."

There was no immediate confirmation from Argentina of the surrender on South Georgia, a dependency 800 miles east of the main Falklands group.

But the military junta said in a statement two hours after the British announcement that a small unit of sailors cornered on the islands swore to resist "until wearing out their defensive capabilities."

"The commander of the group, in his last message, reported that he has

Today's briefing

Budget talks drag along

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Budget negotiators held another round of inconclusive talks at the White House Sunday amid signals that President Reagan stands firmly behind his tax-cut policy and massive defense buildup.

Judging from the comments of at least one participant at Sunday's meeting of White House officials and congressional leaders, the compromise both sides are seeking is still a few days away.

House Budget Committee chairman James Jones, D-Okla., said as he left the 2½ hour meeting, "I never did think we would" make much progress Sunday. Jones' comments appeared to indicate a wide division still exists.

Both sides signaled a willingness to continue the meetings, most likely today or Tuesday.

Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., a close Reagan associate, was hopeful for a compromise later in the week.

Ex-chief set free on bail

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — The former chief of Mexico's national security police, arrested in connection with a $30 million international car theft ring, was free on $200,000 bail Sunday.

Miguel Nazar Haro left the U.S. Federal jail overlooking San Diego Bay late Saturday after bail was posted. Authorities wouldn't say Sunday who posted the bail or where Haro had gone.

The short, gray-haired 57-year-old Nazar was ordered to appear before a U.S. Magistrate May 3 to answer charges of transportation of stolen vehicles and conspiracy to defraud.

Haig supports air strike

NEW YORK (UPI) — Secretary of State Alexander Haig said Israel was justified in its air attack on Lebanon last week, it was reported Sunday.

Haig told Newsweek magazine in an exclusive interview that Israel was correct in assuming attacks by the Palestine Liberation Organization in the West Bank and on Israeli citizens abroad were violations of its cease-fire with Lebanon.

"There have been a series of efforts made by the central PLO, but also splinter groups to move through Jordan into the West Bank," Haig said. "They were perceived from the Israeli point of view, and I think with justice, as violations of the cease-fire."

Haig said, however, he believed an Israeli invasion of Lebanon would benefit no one and the Reagan administration was seeking to prevent such an incursion.

"We don't think it's a constructive outcome, and we don't see any interest

Volcano dusts Tokyo area

TOKYO (UPI) — Mount Asama erupted with a roar today, spitting a lead-grey column 4,500 feet into the sky and blanketing most of Metropolitan Tokyo 200 miles away with fine volcanic ash.

Police said they had not received reports of damage or casualties in the volcanic blast.

A spokesman for the National Earthquake Center said the eruptions before dawn Monday were "only medium-sized."

Residents reported the rain of ash from the 7,626-foot peak 200 miles northwest of the capital all over the city, the spokesman said.

Protests continue in Keys

FLORIDA CITY, Fla. (UPI) — Residents of the Florida Keys, who symbolically seceded from the Union to protest a roadblock designed to catch illegal aliens and drug smugglers, continued their protests Sunday, despite official claims that traffic problems have been ironed out.

Some Keys residents were considering whether to seek a court injunction aimed at halting the Border Patrol roadblock, but no suits had been filed by Sunday.

House fire takes 8 lives

WAGENER, S.C. (UPI) — Fire engulfed a wooden house late Saturday, killing five youngsters and three adults.

Among them was the children's father, who rushed into the blaze in an attempt to save his family, authorities said.

The dead were identified as Harry Lee Maple, 36, and his children, Harry Cothomas, 6; Alvin, 5; Donnie, 4; Pamela, 18 months, and Tina, 3 months. Maple's brother, Jessie, 28, and George Green, 50, were also killed.

Catherine Maple, the children's mother, was the fire's sole survivor. She was cooking on an old wood stove in the kitchen where the fire began. She picked up her son Donnie and, with her husband, tried to rush out of the house.

Boat explodes on river

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — A 30-foot pleasure boat escorting the luxury liner Queen Elizabeth 2 into port for Philadelphia's 300th birthday celebration exploded, burned and sank on the Delaware River Sunday as thousands of people looked on. One man died and 10 people were injured.

The boat was in a flotilla of about 100 private and official craft escorting the Cunard Line luxury ocean liner to the Century IV Celebration, honoring Philadelphia's 300th birthday. Mayor William Green was among official welcomers on the docks and thousands of spectators were on hand.

Salvador death toll soars

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — El Salvador's leading churchman, Msgr. Arturo Rivera y Damas, said Sunday 369 people have been killed in political assassinations and guerrilla attacks since the U.S.-backed elections brought rightists to power March 28.

It was the highest monthly death toll reported by the church in more than a year.

Today's weather

More balmy spring weather appears in store

Twin Falls, Burley-Rupert, Jerome-Gooding areas:
Fair skies and light winds through Tuesday. Highs 65 to 70 degrees today and 70 to 75 on Tuesday. Lows tonight 35 to 40.

Camas Prairie, Hailey, Wood River valley:
Fair skies with light winds through Tuesday. Highs 60 to 65 today and 65 to 70 on Tuesday. Lows in the 20s near 30.

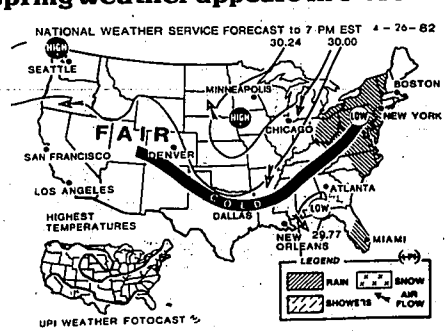

Northern Nevada and Utah:
Variable cloudiness through Tuesday with a few showers or thundershowers over Utah today, increasing on Tuesday. Highs in the 60s or low 70s. Lows in the 20s in Nevada and in the 30s in Utah.

Synopsis:
Only some high clouds are expected over Idaho today as mild spring weather continues.

A weak disturbance crossed northern Idaho early Sunday but it left little to mark its passage. The high clouds are expected to result from moisture moving inland over the California coast.

In the Magic Valley, conditions for field preparation, planting and fertilizing will remain generally good through Wednesday. Some shower activity developing Thursday and Friday may cause delays in field work. Spraying conditions will be fair to good this afternoon as winds increase to 10 to 15 miles an hour.

Little change is expected in maximum and minimum soil temperatures today.

Across Idaho Sunday, winds were westerly at 15 to 20 mph in the Magic Valley and upper Snake River plain, but were light in the northern and southwestern sections of the state. The warmest temperature in the state was 70 degrees at Hagerman and the coldest was 15 at Stanley.

The extended forecast calls for dry Wednesday with temperatures above normal. A few showers, mainly in mountain areas, will develop Thursday and Friday with temperatures near normal. Highs will be near 70 Wednesday, cooling to the 60s by Friday. Lows will range from the low 30s to the low 40s.

Elsewhere in the nation Sunday, the warmest temperature was 96 at Lake Havasu, Ariz., and the coldest was 22 at West Yellowstone, Mont.

Dallas arraignment today

MURPHY (UPI) — Guards stood watch at the Owyhee County jail Sunday over the man accused in the slayings of two Idaho game wardens as authorities prepared to bring Claude Dallas Jr. to trial in what was expected to be an expensive proceeding.

"He's very quiet," said sheriff's dispatcher Lynn Schild. "He's a model prisoner."

Dallas was scheduled to be arraigned today in Third District Magistrate Court on two counts of first-degree murder.

He is accused in the slayings of William Pogue, 50, and Conley Elms, 34, who were shot in January 1981 during an investigation into alleged poaching in the sprawling desert area of southwestern Idaho.

Dallas was being held in an isolation cell Sunday for security reasons, Schild said, and authorities had made arrangements for a nurse practitioner to visit the prisoner, who was wounded in the heel.

Owyhee County Prosecutor Clayton Anderson, meanwhile, said his concerns were mounting over pre-trial publicity in the case that he said was expected to "cost the county a large sum of money."

Flood

Lee Peterson and Jim Peterson, who operate a sheep ranch, lost about 100 head of ewes and lambs when water swept through their corrals and lambing sheds. All of their sheds also washed away.

Haynes said two bridges were closed after water washed around their abutments. And some rural roads were impassable, either because they had been washed out or were under several feet of water.

Several smaller bridges on county roads and on ranches also were damaged. Ross Peck, a dairy farmer, said the canal bridges on his farm were washed out.

County road crews and workers from the Little Wood River Irrigation District were hauling rock and gravel Sunday to make repairs to roads, bridges and canal banks.

Farmers said one of the main problems caused by the flood was the loss of irrigation canals. Until these are repaired, they will be unable to irrigate their crops.

House described the town was "a mess," with debris clinging to fences and mud filling streets, yards and homes.

Despite the damage, the sheriff said it could have been worse; there were no injuries and all but one or two families could remain in their homes.

The Richard Mecham home was one that was evacuated after water and mud were left standing about a foot deep over the main floor.

Both House and Haynes said the sudden rise in temperatures during the past few days, coupled with this winter's record snow, were responsible for the flash flood.

Since record-keeping began in 1938, there has never been this much snow in a single winter, Haynes said. A week ago, he said there was still 80 inches of snow at Galena Summit, and the water content was 40 percent.

"The potential is there for flooding along Big Wood River," the sheriff said. "We may not be be through with flood problems, depending on how fast the snow melts. We have been warning people who live in the flood plain anywhere in the county to keep a close watch on rivers and streams. Sandbags are available, and these people have been advised where they can obtain them, and given other information on preventing damage."

The channel of the Big Wood River was changed several years ago by the Corps of Engineers. This year will be the test, Haynes said, to determine if the old channel area is safe from flooding.

"About 30 or 40 head of our white-face sheep escaped. I guess the water washed them to the edge of the flow, and they scrambled to higher ground," he said.

Most Carey residents spent the entire night and most of Sunday either pumping water from their homes or helping neighbors.

"This town is the greatest," York said. "There has been a crew of men here all night and most of today pumping out the basement of our house. Everybody that didn't have damage was helping someone who did.

"My butcher even went down to the shop to cut off a roast from some meat I had bought for the freezer. He brought it over so I could feed all of the people who were here helping us."

York said the basement of their home, which is about seven-feet deep, was filled completely with water, and another three feet ran over into the rooms on the main floor.

Ray Baird and his wife, Carley, recalled Sunday that about 30 years ago a similar flood hit Carey and a number of ranches to the north.

"Pretty much the same thing happened Saturday night that happened in about 1952," Mr. Baird said. "The upper dam is in the center of my brothers' and my private range. There was a lot of damage that year, too, but it lasted longer. It seems like it was two or so days before it crested, and it crested last night, so the worst is over."

Baird said both of the dams that were destroyed by the flash flood were built of dirt and dated back to "when they used horses to move the soil."

Ross Peck, whose dairy farm was in the path of the rushing water, said he didn't know about the flood until his daughter called him from Carey to say the town was flooding, and he had better check his dairy cattle.

"About 10 minutes later, she called back and said her house was filling up with water. I sent the boys (his sons who help with the dairy operation) out to check the cows, and I went to Carey to help her."

Peck's sons were able to open the gates and drive the cows to higher pastures, but the corrals where they had been kept filled with about four feet of water. The milking barns were not damaged, he said, because they were on higher ground.

"Nobody had any warning," Peck said. "It started hitting about 10 o'clock. I had just stacked 65 tons of hay by the barns yesterday, and about 40 tons of that washed away, but I may be able to salvage some of it."

Peck, who has about 200 head of cattle, said water still was running through the center of his field Sunday evening.

But his daughter, Candy Mecham, had more damage at her home in Carey. Carpets were soaked with water and mud, and had to be taken up and destroyed. He said volunteers were helping pump about 10 inches of water and thick mud out of her home.

"No, she didn't have flood insurance. I would bet there isn't more than one person in the whole town that would have had insurance. You just don't expect that to happen."

Many of the 88 utilities claim that BPA forecasts of impending shortages in the mid-1970s played a major role in their decisions to become obligated for the plants.

Several of the participants planned to meet this past weekend in Washington to seek a way to avoid paying bond costs for the 30-year life of the project.

Hansen also asked the GAO investigators to pursue reports that the federal Rural Electric Association has threatened some co-op officials to ensure that bonds for the WPPSS projects would be paid.

REA officials allegedly told the co-op board members they would be replaced if they did not go along with "controlled termination" of the two plants.

Higgins said he plans to meet this week with Rupert Mayor Bill Whittom, a vocal critic of the BPA, and with other municipal and co-op leaders in Idaho and Oregon.

Whittom was in Washington state Friday to attend the meeting called by a small Orcas Island cooperative to explore alternatives to continued payment of the bonds.

The GAO will report back to Hansen sometime in May, according to Higgins.

The investigation will not address questions regarding the three remaining WPPSS projects, he said.

BPA has signed purchase agreements for the power from WPPSS plants 1 and 2, as well as for 70 percent of WPPSS plant No. 3. However, the agency has recommended that construction be deferred on WPPSS plant No. 1 for two to five years because the power is not needed yet.

The plant is 63 percent completed, according to WPPSS figures.

Weeping Israeli women soldiers support each other at Sharm el Sheikh after Sinai pullout

Israel departs Sinai

SHARM EL SHEIKH, Egypt (UPI) — Amid tears of sorrow and shouts of joy, Israel lowered its flag over the Sinai after 15 years Sunday.

It returned the desert region to Egypt with pledges from both sides of peace forever.

"No more war. No more bloodshed," Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin said in a joint TV program with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, echoing the words of the late Egyptian President Anwar Sadat. "Peace forever. Salaam."

"Salaam" is the Arabic word for "peace."

"Tomorrow," Mubarak said, "a new dawn will break and the banners of peace will be hoisted forever."

Neither Begin nor Mubarak attended the ceremonies in Sharm el Sheikh and Rafah that restored all of the desert to Egyptian control for the first time since it was captured by Israel in the 1967 Middle East war.

But Mubarak did telephone Begin to congratulate him on the Israeli withdrawal that was completed as scheduled.

Israeli soldiers wept, sang their national anthem, "Hatikvah" — "The Hope" —and watched their blue and white flag lowered for the last time over the 23,000 square mile peninsula, the scene of five wars in 34 years.

Reagan lauds Israel, Egypt

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan hailed the withdrawal of Israeli forces from the Sinai Sunday as "a truly major sacrifice" by the Jewish state and lauded Egypt for its "courageous initiative" to achieve Middle East peace.

In a statement released by the White House, Reagan also pledged the United States will continue to "pursue the course of peace" under the Camp David treaty.

Reagan also spoke by telephone with Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Egypt's President Hosni Mubarak to congratulate them, the White House said.

"We are not retreating from Sinai," Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon said in an Order of the Day read out in all army camps. "We are demonstrating our desire to move toward peace."

"We are leaving the Sinai primarily for our own sake, for the sake of our children, and for future generations to see . . . that our hand is extended to peace," an Israeli army general identified only by his first name as Aharon said.

Five hours later at the Egyptian ceremony near Rafah, a divided border town in the northeastern Sinai, 300 people shouted, "Long Live Egypt."

The Egyptian governor of southern Sinai, Lt. Gen. Fuad Aziz Ghali, a hero of the 1973 war, wept as he raised the red, white and black Egyptian flag at Rafah.

The pullback was carried out on schedule under the terms of the 1979 Egypt-Israel peace treaty after an intensive U.S. diplomatic effort in the last two weeks to iron out last minute problems between the two countries.

U.S., Israeli and Egyptian negotiators continued work on resolving a dispute over a 700-yard-wide swath of land at Taba, near Eilat in southern Israel, where an Israeli tourist complex is being built.

Sharon, referring to the traumatic demolition of Israeli settlements before the pullback, pledged, "We shall increase settlement in the Golan Heights, Judea and Samaria — the West Bank — and the Gaza district."

Squeeze on U.S. in OAS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Argentina and its allies hope to up the ante in the Falkland Islands dispute today by increasing hemispheric pressure on Britain — a move that could put the United States in a delicate position.

The squeeze involves a bid to a special meeting of the Organization of American States urge Britain to lift its blockade around the disputed islands.

With the situation in the South Atlantic verging on full-scale conflict, any OAS action could force the United States to make a choice between its past ties to Britain and the future it hopes to forge with the nations of Central and South American.

The hemispheric foreign ministers' meeting in Washington was not expected to lead to direct sanctions against Britain — unless the situation worsens dramatically.

But events threatened to overtake the diplomatic maneuverings. British forces landed Sunday on the Argentine-held Falkland Islands dependency of South Georgia, backed by an earlier helicopter assault on an Argentine submarine in the isolated island's port.

Argentine Foreign Minister Nicanor Costa Mendez arrived in Washington Sunday for talks with Secretary of State Alexander Haig and for the OAS session. He said his country is "technically" at war with Britain but still hopeful for a diplomatic solution.

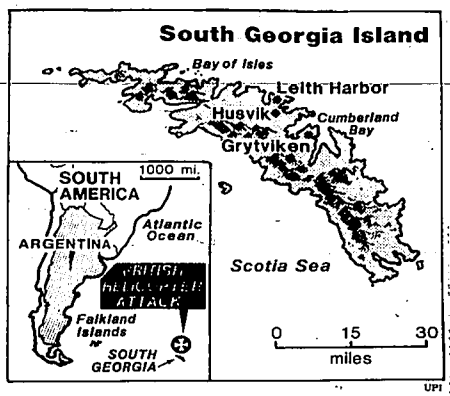

Asked about reports that the United States would favor Britain in the crunch because of its long-standing alliance, Costa Mendez said, "We have to remember that on the other side, for the United States, Latin America is its future."

British Ambassador to the United States Nicholas Henderson said, however, he has "no doubt" the United States will ultimately back Britain.

OAS Secreary-General Alejandro Orfila said he believes a negotiated settlement could still be reached.

Speaking in Miami Sunday, Orfila left open the possibility that the OAS may not take sides in the dispute, saying the ministers need not take any formal action. He also said he "sympathized" with the neutral position of the United States as it seeks to negotiate a settlement.

But when asked what the OAS could do about the fighting, Orfila shrugged his shoulders and said, "What else can a diplomat do except engage in dialogue, talk?"

Tower says U.S. must back Britain

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, said Sunday the United States has "no choice" but to support Britain with limited military aid in its conflict with Argentina over control of the Falkland Islands.

Pronouncing American public opinion "substantially pro-British," Tower pointed to Argentina's "history of oppressive governments."

Tower, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, also said the United States could do "a number of things" to help the British, but advocated a strictly "passive" American role in the military aspects of the dispute.

The senator appeared on ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley."

destroyed all his codes and will do the same with his radio equipment, before beginning the last battle," it said.

Fighting switched from Grytviken to the port of Leith, to the northeast, later Sunday, the junta said. It said the British destroyer Exeter was sitting off of Leith, "presumably waiting for proper conditions for a new assault."

The ruling Argentine junta said earlier in a communique that the 140 Argentine troops on South Georgia were holding out against "intense cannon fire" from British naval units and machine-gun fire from jet fighters.

Local news reports that could not immediately be confirmed said several Argentines were injured, two seriously, in the attack on the submarine. The reports said the helicopters attacked a U.S.-made Guppy class submarine named the Santa Fe.

Nott said the Argentine force hoisted the white flag of surrender about two hours after the British troops landed at 9 a.m. MDT.

It was the first military action after three weeks of talks failed to reach a settlement in the crisis. Argentine troops occupied South Georgia on April 3, a day after seizing the main body of the Falklands.

Britain sent a 40-ship fleet carrying 4,000 troops to the South Atlantic to assert its claim to sovereignty over the islands. There are an estimated 10,000 Argentine troops on the main Falkland Islands group.

Foreign Secretary Francis Pym's spokesman said the British government acted in self-defense and reaffirmed earlier statements of hope for a diplomatic solution.

"The British government's position is there is not a war going on," the spokesman said.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Sondra McCarty said the reports of fighting on South Georgia were "further confirmation of the gravity of the situation," adding the United States was still committed to a diplomatic solution of the dispute.

Mayor is listening to residents' gripes

While he has been in office less than four months, Mayor Chris Talkington of Twin Falls already is proving to be a good listener. And that's an important aspect of being mayor.

Under his leadership, the city has decided to look at all of the complaints lodged against Magic Valley Cablevision, and it is investigating what degree of regulatory power it has over the cable TV company.

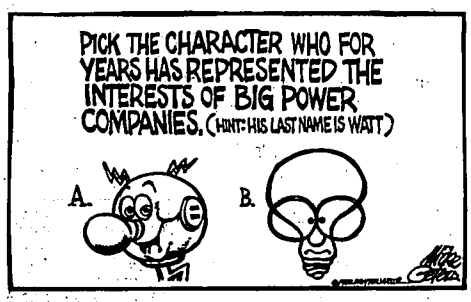

Talkington even has suggested that council form a review committee to hear complaints about the quality of service the firm provides. A decision on that recommendation probably will be made at council's first meeting in May.

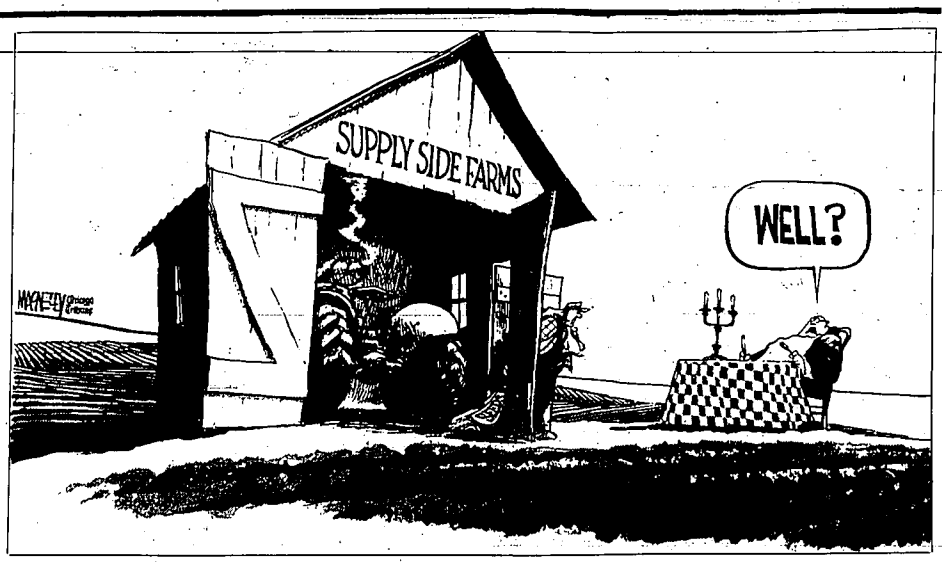

Saturday, the mayor spent a good portion of his afternoon touring Ramage Street in the South Park area. Residents want the city to put irrigation pipe in open ditches along the street and then cover the ditches with dirt. They claim the present situation is dangerous and is the city's responsibility to fix. City officials have disagreed on the responsibility part.

While he's obviously listening to residents' concerns, Talkington also deserves credit for being fair and not making wild promises.

With Cablevision, he has made it quite plain that if the review committee is established, the city will hear only complaints that can be documented. And with the Ramage Street residents, he listened to their side of the story but promised no definite action until the matter of responsibility is resolved.

In the past, we've heard complaints that City Hall would not listen to its citizens. It's good to see Mayor Talkington taking this kind of leadership role. It's healthy for the whole community.

Moon rock expert now sorts mail

Rifling, or what is known in the government parlance as "reduction in force," is taking its toll on Washington.

By law, those with seniority cannot be fired from a department if there is another job available, even if it is a much lower one. The person has to be kept on for two years before he can be let go. Many overqualified people are taking menial jobs just so they can stay in the government and collect their pensions, or hope that someone will put them back where they belong.

One of these happens to be Delbeck, who has a Ph.D. in geology, and formerly worked with the U.S. Geographical Survey Department studying moon rocks.

I went to see Delbeck out in Reston, Va. Instead of being directed to his laboratory, I was told I would find him in the mail room.

"Dr. Delbeck, what are you doing here?" I asked him.

"Sorting mail. It was the only job open when we had our last riff."

"What a comedown!"

"It's actually not a bad job as soon as you learn the alphabet. You see, you ignore the first name and only look at the initial of the last name. Then, you put the letter in the box corresponding to the letter on the envelope. When I get the letters all sorted out, I give them to Dr. Fromm, and he marks the rooms on them."

"Dr. Fromm?"

"Yes, he used to head the mineral exploration division, and he's a whiz at knowing room numbers without having to look them up in the directory."

"What happens after Dr. Fromm puts the room numbers on them?"

"Then Dr. Lasker takes them and puts them in a supermarket basket and delivers them to the various offices."

"What did Dr. Lasker do before he took that job?"

"He was in charge of studying earthquake faults around the world. He was working on a new way of predicting them in advance, until the OMB decided it was a waste of money."

"He must be very bitter."

"He was until the head of the mail room explained to him that delivering people's mail on time was just as important as figuring where the next earthquake would take place. Sometimes while Lasker is waiting for us to sort out the mail, he sneaks off in a corner with his calculator and predicts earthquakes just for the hell of it. But he has to be careful no one sees him, because there's talk they may lay off someone in the mail room, and he has less seniority than Dr. Fromm and I do."

"Do you ever examine moon rocks anymore?"

"No, but if it's a light day, I might take out my microscope and analyze what kind of ink they used to print a postage stamp. I like to keep my hand in, just in case something opens upstairs."

"I can't believe the government would be so stupid as to allow three scientists like yourselves to work in a mail room."

"We're lucky. Dr. Ridgewell, who was just about to figure out a way of measuring ultraviolet rays by a laser beam, is now operating a paper-shredding machine in the boiler room. She was riffed out of a Nobel Prize."

The head of the mail room came over to us. "Delbeck, go down to the cafeteria and bring me up a coffee and a Danish."

"Yes, sir," Dr. Delbeck said. "Cream and sugar?"

"You know I take it black, dummy," the head said as he walked away.

"Do you let him talk to you like that?"

"As long as they pay us $50,000 a year, what choice do I have? Look, I'm not going to stay in the mail room forever. Dr. Billington, who discovered titanium deposits on the ocean floor in the Gulf of Mexico, is retiring in a couple of months, and when he leaves, he's going to recommend me for his job."

"What does he do now?"

"He works in the motor pool as a night watchman."

Divorce, Army style, leaves the wife out in the cold

BOSTON — The story has a classic edge to it. A tale of Anywife who was told and believed that her marriage was a partnership. A tale of Anywife who later heard her "partner" swear in a divorce court that all the money he earned was his, and she didn't deserve a nickel of it.

The only thing different about the current version is that this time, it's the military giving lip service in marriage and disservice in divorce.

But let me go back a bit.

Almost a year ago now, the Supreme Court ruled that the prized military pension, the reward for 20 years of duty, could no longer be considered a part of family assets to be divvied up in case of divorce.

The court said that Congress had intended military pensions to go only to the person who was enlisted. "The plight of an ex-spouse of a retired service member is often a serious one," the justices wrote, but unless Congress changed the law, the pension belonged to him (usually a him) and him alone.

Since then, there have been no less than eight bills filed in Congress by bedfellows as strange as conservative Sen. Roger Jepsen, R-Iowa, and liberal Rep. Pat Schroeder, D-Colo. Yet this month or next, Jepsen will chair the fourth and last of the Senate hearings on bills all designed to provide more protection for divorced military spouses.

But in step with our partnership fable, the opponents of these bills are none other than the armed forces. The brass from land, sea, and air are expected to testify in full combat gear.

These folk are part of the same organizations that write endless odes to military wives in their family manuals. In San Diego, even the grocery bags bear the message: "The Navy Wife . . . The toughest job in the Navy! We want to keep the good families in."

Furthermore, any one of these officers can, I am sure, sympathetically list the special problems of the wives who often hold these good families together.

At the lowest level, the pay scale makes it necessary for most of them to work, and the mobility makes it impossible for most of them to build a career. Only 13 percent ever have their own pension plans.

At the middle level, there is often an overt or subtle expectation for wives to do extensive volunteer work for the military. Indeed "wife grades" often appear on their husbands' records.

Suzanne Davis, a longtime Navy wife and the current head of the National Military Wives Association puts it succinctly: "You can be asked not to work (in order to) support your husband's career, asked to be sole nurturer of children for long periods of time when your husband is away, asked to live in some pretty unsavory places, asked to put the military first ahead of yourself and your children. Then at the end, if you're divorced, the military says you have no right to any part of it. It's a slap in the face."

The Pentagon position is, need I tell you, slightly different. The Department of Defense maintains that they need this pension as a perk to keep re-enlistment up. Citing some highly suspect figures — senators are still trying to find the source — they said that thousands would drop out before retirement if their pot of pension gold had to be shared with ex-spouses.

But here, the military doesn't even have a grip on its own self-interest. All the branches know that the key to re-enlistment right now is the attitude of a spouse, not the existence of an ex-spouse. It is the wife who cannot help being affected by the attitude portrayed in Divorce, Army Style.

Rosemary Locke, the legislative head of NMWA, a wife and the mother of career Navy men says, "There are so many pressures now on the military family to get out. The career Army is a married Army. About 75 to 80 percent of those at the four-year level are married. What are they going to say to women about the benefits of supporting their husband's career?"

The former military partner doesn't just part with her pension. The proposals before Congress also deal in one way or another with her lost survivor and medical benefits. But any bill that comes out of committee is likely to at least give divorced Army wives the same pension rights as the foreign service or the civil service.

In the meantime, if you have the Pentagon for a partner, it's time to read the fine print on the military marriage contract.

Federal used-car regulations deserve the rumble seat

WASHINGTON — Over the next couple of weeks, members of Congress will have to make up their minds on the Federal Trade Commission's pending regulation on the sale of used cars — whether to buy this lemon or to call off the deal.

The proposition is one more piece of paternalism. It ought to be junked.

This regulation has been limping around legislative halls longer than an old DeSoto. Back in 1974, when the regulatory climate was a good deal sunnier, Congress directed the FTC to work up a used-car regulation. Early in 1976, the FTC published a first draft. Everybody walked around the idea, kicking the tires; nothing much happened. In September 1978, the FTC produced a "final staff report" that weighed half a ton. The report delighted Ralph Nader and depressed car dealers.

Again, nothing much happened. On Capitol Hill the climate got chilly. At one point, 51 senators signed a notice to the FTC that the then-pending rule would have to be remodeled. Last August, the FTC produced its final repaired and repainted version. Unless both houses of Congress adopt resolutions of disapproval by mid-May, the regulation will become effective six months later.

The House Commerce Committee is expected to report a veto resolution almost any time now. If the House adopts the resolution, as expected, the Senate probably will follow along.

Then, we would expect some form of court challenge to the legislative veto, and the whole proposition could be parked for months or years.

The regulation, if it ever goes into effect, would apply to every used-car dealer in the nation — about 70,000 small-business men. A dealer would be defined as a person or company selling more than five used cars in a 12-month period. The rule would require every such dealer to post a window sticker on his automobiles. The sticker would inform prospective customers that "a seller's spoken promises may be no good," or perhaps that "spoken promises are difficult to enforce."

"Ask us to put all promises in writing," the sticker continues. "You can make a seller keep written promises."

After that friendly beginning, the window sticker would list 14 general categories of possible defects, subdivided into 52 specific problems.

Does the car suffer from "abnormal visible exhaust discharge"? Are the shock absorbers functioning "improperly"? Do the brake linings or pads have a thickness of less than one-thirty-second of an inch? The dealer would be expected to disclose information about any specific defect of which he is aware.

At first glance, the regulation looks pretty spiffy. After all, why shouldn't a dealer be compelled to disclose the existence of faulty brakes or a rusted muffler? If a head gasket needs to be replaced, isn't this something the buyer should know?

The problems here are threefold. Without a bureaucratic army, the regulation could not possibly be enforced. The rule would add significantly to a dealer's cost of doing business, thus increasing the price of used cars and driving more sales into the unregulated market of owner sales. The rule would broaden the power of federal authority at a time when the trend toward state responsibility is gaining momentum.

The whole proposition, it seems to me, amounts to overkill. Today's used-car dealers are the descendants of the horse traders of yore. Doubtless there were some unscrupulous traders in the old days — men who would palm off a mean-tempered beast as a sweet old mare that had been ridden only to church on Sundays — and doubtless there are some sly fellows in the used-car business today. Any industry that annually sells 1 million units of anything will have its bad actors.

But it is simply a wrongheaded public policy to lay the heavy hand of the federal government on a business that can be effectively policed by its own members and by local authorities. The civil courts are not incapable of dealing with outright fraud. Existing laws on express and implied warranty still function. The ancient admonition of "caveat emptor" — buyer beware! — still applies.

The last thing on earth the depressed auto industry needs right now is another wet blanket of rules, regulations, inspections, paperwork and added costs. If we mean to get government off the backs of our people, we ought not to put the FTC in the rumble seat now.

James J. Kilpatrick writes his "A Conservative View" column for the Universal Press Syndicate.

RFK slayer faces state parole panel today

SOLEDAD, Calif. (UPI) — Sirhan Sirhan, assassin of Sen. Robert Kennedy, today goes before a parole panel that must decide under election year pressure whether to break the state's promise to free him.

The short, husky Palestinian refugee, due for parole in September, 1984, will emerge at 3 p.m. MDT from his cell in a maximum security unit at California Training Facility, a prison 120 miles south of San Francisco.

Hemmed in by guards, Sirhan will sit eight days in a cramped hearing room while 35 witnesses testify on a petition that the state cancel the parole plan it gave him seven years ago.

The campaign to block Sirhan's release and his intended return to the Arab world is led by Los Angeles County District Attorney John Van de Kamp. He has submitted a 235-page legal brief demanding that the state Board of Prison Terms rescind Sirhan's parole.

Van de Kamp is running for the Democratic nomination for state attorney general in the June primary election.

"It is very hard in our system to take the position that an individual never should be paroled," says Van de Kamp's deputy, Larry Trapp, who will represent his boss at Soledad. "In Sirhan's case, parole is premature. As long as he remains politically oriented, he should never be paroled."

Luke McKissack, the Los Angeles criminal lawyer who will argue for Sirhan, calls the hearing "a political football."

"It's ex post facto and it's unfair to Sirhan," McKissack says. "They knew all the circumstances in 1975. Making prisoners uncertain about parole will turn our prisons into jungles."

A refugee from what is now Israel, Sirhan gunned down Kennedy at Los Angeles' Ambassador Hotel on the night of June 8, 1968. Sirhan said he was enraged by Kennedy's support for sale of American fighter planes to Israel. His shots wounded five other persons and he was arrested on the spot.

Originally sentenced to death, Sirhan escaped San Quentin Prison's gas chamber in 1972 when the state Supreme Court ruled the death penalty unconstitutional. His sentence was commuted to life.

In 1975, a parole panel set Sirhan's release for February, 1986. Customary credit for good behavior has advanced the date to Sept. 1, 1984.

State policy at the time was that all life prisoners be given future parole dates as an incentive to good behavior.

California courts since have ruled that public resentment over a convict's crime can be a factor in deciding on parole.

Sirhan's possible freedom is up to a panel of two men and a woman. Two are members of the Board of Prison Terms. They are Ray Brown, former deputy police chief of Oakland, and Loretta Collier. The third is Wayne Estelle, one of the board's professional hearing officers.

In its early stages, Van de Kamp's case for keeping Sirhan locked up leaned heavily on claims by two fellow prisoners that Sirhan threatened more violence after his release.

Lawrence Eugene Wilson, a lifer for murder, says Sirhan threatened to kill Sen. Edward Kennedy after being freed.

Carmen Faizone, another prison acquaintance of Sirhan, said Kennedy's assassain told him of a plan to steal American nuclear weapons for Libya. Faizone now is on the lam from the FBI.

The emphasis in Van de Kamp's case has shifted to legal arguments. Trapp, 40, will present them at Soledad. It is his first involvement with Sirhan.

Trapp says the panel that gave Sirhan his parole date in 1975 did not get important information about death threats Sirhan had made against various people. One of them was Los Angeles attorney Robert Kaiser, a member of Sirhan's trial defense team, who later wrote a book about the case.

Trapp also will cite a 1980 interview Sirhan granted to A.H. Mehdi, chairman of the New York-based American-Arab Relations Committee. In it, Sirhan is quoted as calling the late President Anwar Sadat of Egypt "a traitor who should be dealt with as such." Sadat later was assassinated.

Ohio GOP begins search for Ashbrook successor

JOHNSTOWN, Ohio (UPI) — Conservative Rep. John M. Ashbrook's death Saturday in the midst of a U.S. Senate campaign left Ohio Republicans scrambling to find a replacement and doctors looking for the cause of massive internal bleeding that killed him.

The 53-year-old Ashbrook collapsed at his Johnstown office Saturday and died about 90 minutes later despite efforts of paramedics and Dr. Robert S. Young, Ashbrook's personal physician for over 25 years, whose office is across the street from the Ashbrook's.

Young was preparing to declare publicly that Ashbrook was fit "for a full campaign load," a pronouncement made necessary by lingering concern since Ashbrook collapsed March 17 in a Mansfield restaurant.

Aides attributed that collapse to exhaustion and tests at Mansfield General Hospital and the Cleveland Clinic did not disprove them.

Autopsy results showed his heart was in good condition, said Dr. Patrick Fadel. Ashbrook died from stomach and intestinal tract bleeding that Fadel said could have been unrelated to the first collapse.

Several weeks will be needed to determine the exact cause of the bleeding, Fadel said, but main suspects are other medication Ashbrook may have taken or aspirin.

"He could have had a headache and taken two aspirin," Fadel said. "That could have done it."

Ashbrook's bid to take the Senate seat held by liberal Democrat Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, underway since 1981, ran into difficulties in recent months, but he was still considered the favorite to capture the nomination.

A staunch advocate of Ronald Reagan's economic programs and hard-line foreign policy, Ashbrook's popularity had declined somewhat of late.

Additionally, the Cleveland Plain Dealer ran a series of articles reporting Ashbrook — a 21-year Congressional veteran — failed to report nearly $12,000 in campaign contributions from special interest groups and also that he paid himself $60,000 in campaign funds for a computer which he sold to his Senate campaign committee.

Ashbrook's death made state Sen. Paul Pfeifer of Bucyrus the Republicans' best hope against Metzenbaum.

One of the most conservative members of Congress — he voted against the 1964 Civil Rights Bill — Ashbrook's lifetime rating by the American Conservative Union was 96 percent.

In 1972, in a doomed-from-the-start race, he challenged Richard Nixon for the GOP presidential nomination.

Ashbrook was also a publisher who used his Licking Countian and Centerburg Ohio Gazette to further his own ambitions and all conservative causes.

He is survived by his second wife Jean, three daughters, a brother and two sisters.

Carter remains an outsider but starts return to stage

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Fifteen months out of the White House, Jimmy Carter remains the Washington outsider but some believe there has been a gentle movement of feeling in the country toward exonerating him.

The portrait of the former president remains blurred -- the 1976 campaign question "Jimmy who?" has never been fully answered.

Carter retains much of the intensely private behavior that characterized him in the White House and helped lead to a sound rejection at the polls at the end of his first term.

Sources on Capitol Hill say he rarely, if ever, telephones anyone in Congress, and probably few other persons in Washington except former press secretary Jody Powell and maybe one or two others.

But there are signs now Carter is preparing to resume a spot on the national stage — with the Democratic Party's blessing.

With the job of writing his White House memoirs pretty well completed and, more important, an apparent feeling the Reagan administration is proving the worth of his presidency, Carter is starting to speak out on the issues that concern him most: the environment, human rights, peace and nuclear disarmament.

The reemergence is linked to a changing view of Carter. "You look at the alternative (President Reagan), and Carter looks better," one former aide said.

For months after his January 1981 retreat back home to Plains, Ga., it was hard to find a member of Congress who would say anything good about him. Occasionally he is still the butt of jokes and the snide comment.

Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., remarked a recent press dinner that he had lost to Carter in 14 consecutive 1976 primaries. Then Udall quipped, "How would you like to have that on your record?"

JIMMY CARTER
Regaining some favor

"Jimmy Carter's name still comes up occasionally in Washington," New York Times reporter Phil Galley wrote earlier this month, "and when it does, the reaction typically consists of jokes, winces, shrugs and frowns."

But Carter is moving back toward the spotlight. He is scheduled to speak at the Montgomery County, Md., Democratic fundraiser in suburban Washington Saturday night and plans to return to the nation's capital in June for an undisclosed event.

"People are realizing what a great president he was in view of Reaganomics," said Denise O'Leary, ball co-chairman.

"He feels he's been vindicated by events, whether in the Middle East or on human rights," said Democratic National Committee spokesman Bob Neumann.

Neumann added he hopes Carter will attend the Democrats' mid-term conference in Philadelphia June 25-27.

A Washington lawyer, a former White House aide, said there has been "quite a bit of change" in the last two months in feeling toward Carter.

A group of former aides, questioned about Carter's shortcomings, agreed on one key: He would not spend time cultivating politicians.

"Jimmy Carter just didn't have and never acquired a lot of close personal relationships with prominent people in Washington," said Powell, now a Washington commentator.

"You need a rear guard after you've left to defend yourself," said Christopher Matthews, administrative assistant and spokesman for House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., and former White House speechwriter.

"I don't think he (Carter) saw anyone (socially) at night," Matthews said. "That really hurt him. Even Richard Nixon had friends even to the bitter end.

"Carter never became a part of the establishment in a way that even Nixon did. . . . Nixon was a party man. Carter was not really a party man."

One person, who asked not to be identified, said the impression Carter was "sanctimonious, cold and arrogant" was not entirely without basis. He continued:

"He felt he had been elected to carry out some changes and he tried to carry out that mandate. He was elected as an outsider. In trying to be true to that, he alienated people. He was weaker, more vacillating than he should have been."

But the same source pointed out that Carter had "a genuine commitment to fairness and would go the extra mile in the interest of peace, arms control, and human rights. You look at the alternative (President Reagan), and Carter looks better."

Woman says she had to pacify shaken kidnapper during ordeal

OLYMPIA, Wash. (UPI) — Connie Patterson, a bank manager's wife who was gagged and bound to a tree just out of reach of her baby, says the man who abducted her in a botched ransom attempt was often so shaken she had to calm him down.

During her long nightmare in the dark woods near Tumwater, she was afraid for her infant and a second abducted daughter who she didn't know had been released unharmed.

"You read about the people who aren't found," she said.

The slender kidnapper — who called himself "Dave" — had led her husband through a cat-and-mouse game, directing him from one telephone booth to another in an attempt to extort an unspecified amount of money from the father of five. He was still at large Sunday.

The FBI, Thurston and Lewis County authorities said they have a number of leads, as well as a composite sketch of "Dave," from which to work.

Study says doctors blind to costs of services

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Doctors influenced or controlled 70 percent of the nearly $280 billion Americans spent on health care last year, but most are blind to the cost of the services they order, a congressional study concludes.

A recent General Accounting Office study said doctor education can save money by promoting shorter hospital stays, fewer laboratory tests and less frequent followup visits.

"It has been estimated that 70 percent of all expenditures for health care are directly influenced, if not controlled, by the decisions of physicians," GAO said, estimating U.S. health spending was $278.5 billion last year.

"With such a large impact on health care costs, physicians can play a significant role in reducing health care costs," said the study, "Physician Cost-Containment Training Can Reduce Medical Costs."

Doctors decide, for example, whether minor surgery should be done in a hospital or office, how many tests should be done and what drugs should be prescribed, and can also influence patients to adopt healthier lifestyles.

Study after study shows doctors are "often unaware of the economic effects of the decisions they make," the report said.

"Physicians' knowledge of cost-containment principles has been demonstrated to be an important element in the nation's efforts to control health care cost," it said.

GAO reviewed 11 studies of the impact of education on cost-effective use of medical services. Eight of the 11 dealt with laboratory tests; six documented reductions in lab use, one showed a short-term drop and another showed no change.

One study found a 29 percent to 47 percent reduction in the number of tests ordered by first year residents who were given moderate financial incentives or faculty supervision, an average of $455 per hospitalization, GAO said.

A study at a University of Vermont clinic found that "applying basic management skills to medical practice" cut hospitalization 63 percent, clinic visits 24 percent and patient spending 19 percent over five years.

The report said medical schools and residency programs "have been leaders in efforts to increase physician sensitivity to cost effectiveness," helped by more than $2.4 million in grants from the National Fund for Medical Education.

But the efforts vary widely, GAO said, urging they be incorporated into clinical training "when students are developing their practice patterns."

Success hinges on commitment by medical school teachers, GAO said, and also suggested cost-containment questions be included on required national examinations for doctors and medical students.

Nuclear test jars Nevada

PAHUTE MESA, Nev. (UPI) — A nuclear device up to seven times more powerful than the bombs dropped on Japan during World War II was triggered 1,890 feet underground at the Nevada Test Site Sunday by British and U.S. scientists.

As the British fleet moved into position in the Falkland Island crisis, British and U.S. scientists began the countdown which culminated in a 10:05 a.m. MDT detonation. The test was delayed 76 hours because of adverse weather and a technical difficulty.

Some earth motion from the blast was felt by residents in Las Vegas 110 miles away. Hanging lamps swayed slightly and the earth motion which reached Las Vegas about 45 seconds after the detonation was magnified in high rise structures.

What's what

Cockroaches hate light. They come out of their crevices about two hours after nightfall to feed, then scurry for cover when you flip the switch. Bright Ides No. 677B in our "How to Make a Fortune" File calls for rigging an electric switch timer to turn on lightbulbs in the kitchen and pantry for two out of every 10 minutes in the night. That ought to exhaust the little rascals. Patent pending.

FEATHERS

Q. How many feathers on a hummingbird?
A. Which kind of hummingbird? The ruby-throated hummingbird has 940. I haven't counted the feathers on all kinds, though.

Q. How long has beer been sold in cans?
A. Since 1935 Krueger Beer in Newton, N.J., put out the first such.

Q. Why is "morphine" called by that name?
A. After Morpheus, the Greek god of sleep.

Q. What music was played at Peter Sellers' funeral?
A. Glenn Miller's "In the Mood." Sellers had once requested it for his funeral.

MUST HAVE GUN

The City Council of Kennesaw, Ga., recently voted unanimously to require all heads of households there to keep a gun and ammunition handy. The pattern dates back to the early militia of colonial America. It's similar to the tradition in Switzerland.

To be a boulder, the rock has to be at least 10 inches in diameter. It also has to be somewhat round. If it's angular, it's not a boulder but a block.

Apparent heart attack fatal to Chicago's Cardinal Cody

CHICAGO (UPI) — Cardinal John Patrick Cody, embattled leader of the nation's largest Roman Catholic diocese for more than 16 years, died Sunday of an apparent heart attack only months before he was to retire. He was 74.

Paramedics rushed the archbishop of Chicago, who had been under federal investigation for alleged diversion of church funds to a childhood friend, to Northwestern Hospital at 11:10 p.m. MST.

Hospital spokesman Curt Thompson said emergency room staff found no heartbeat and Cody was pronounced dead at 12:19 a.m.

A private nurse who looked in on Cody as he slept Saturday night found the cardinal to be in "some difficulty" at 11:45 p.m., Thompson said. The nurse administered cardio-pulmonary resuscitation and summoned paramedics.

Thompson said Cody apparently died of a heart attack, but the cause was unofficial. Cody's family was to decide whether an autopsy would be performed.

East Chicago District Patrolman Frank W. Kromidas, dispatched to the cardinal's residence to assist with lifesaving efforts, said only the nurse was present when Cody was stricken.

"Cody was in his second-floor bedroom in his pajamas," Kromidas said. "His male nurse and paramedics were working on him. Everything that could be done was done. He did not appear to be conscious."

Last rites were administered by the Rev. Matthew McDonald, fire department chaplain, who said Cody was unconscious when he arrived at the hospital.

Cody, who suffered from heart disease and diabetes, had been hospitalized six times within the last year. He was to retire after his 75th birthday next Christmas Eve, just over a year after celebrating the 50th anniversary of his ordination.

CARDINAL JOHN CODY
Dies at age of 74

He had been under fire since September 1981, when the Chicago Sun-Times broke a series of front-page stories reporting the U.S. attorney's office was investigating whether the cardinal had improperly diverted up to $1 million in tax-free church funds in order to benefit a lifelong friend.

Federal prosecutors later confirmed that an investigation was under way.

The Board of Consultors, a committee of more than a dozen priests, will meet today to make funeral arrangements and appoint an administrator to oversee archdiocesan affairs until a successor is appointed by Pope John Paul II, a spokesman said.

Word of Cody's death was conveyed to the Vatican, said Monsignor Francis Brackin, vicar general and acting administrative head of the archdiocese. There was no immediate official reaction.

Sunday masses throughout the archdiocese were dedicated to Cody, although no plans had been made for special services.

Cody had made no direct public response to reports of the federal investigation, but in one of his increasingly rare public appearances implied that an attack on him could be considered an attack on the church.

The controversy came at the end of a long and successful career for the prelate.

Once John Patrick Cody found his vocation to the priesthood, he won rapid advancement — study and doctorates at the North American College in Rome, Vatican service under two future popes, bishoprics in five cities and, finally, the cardinalate of the largest Roman Catholic archdiocese in the United States.

In his years as cardinal archbishop of Chicago, he came under harsh criticism for closing schools in black areas of the city and — his detractors said — seeking to impose absolute rule on the archdiocese with little regard to the rules of collegiality laid down by Vatican II.

"I think I have had a very, very extraordinary life as a priest," he said in an interview in 1978.

"I've always been in somewhat of a position of authority, but I've always been with great men I admired, to whom I was very obedient and very loyal, and these are the virtues that today are lacking.

"I have the job and I'm responsible for it and nobody else."

As leader of the church in Chicago, he was entrusted with the spiritual guidance of 2.4 million Roman Catholics, director of 2,700 priests and 6,400 nuns, administrator of a corporation valued at $184 million.

Federal probe set in bully's death

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Postmaster Jim Hartman and several of the townsfolk who saw Skidmore, Mo., bully Kenneth Rex McElroy gunned down outside a tavern last July are to testify before a federal grand jury convening today.

About 10 FBI agents last week tramped through the attention-weary community of 440, asking questions about the slaying of the 47-year-old pig farmer, antique dealer and dog breeder who called himself Ken Rex.

"They asked me the usual questions that I've answered several times before," said Hartman. He said the subpoena the FBI served him Tuesday did not mention the specific case, but he assumed it concerns McElroy. He is to testify Thursday.

Gene McFadin, attorney for the victim's wife, Trena, said they both hoped the federal grand jury would do what the state jury could not and name the person who opened fire on McElroy in broad daylight on the town's main street.

Mrs. McElroy, who has gone into hiding since her husband's slaying, has said she will continue to fear for her life until McElroy's killer — whom she identified as tavern owner Del Clement at both the coroner's inquest and the state grand jury — is brought to justice.

"I am tickled to death to see it happen," McFadin said of the federal probe.

The 260-pound McElroy — disliked and feared by many townspeople — had a history of terrorizing the northwest Missouri countryside. No charges were ever filed for his vigilante-type slaying.

Reserve unit backs freeze

HELENA, Mont. (UPI) — The Reserve Officers Association of Montana has passed a resolution calling for a conditional freeze on nuclear weapons.

The resolution, drafted by national vice president for the Navy Capt. Bennett Sparks, said the United States and Soviet Union "have adequate nuclear weapons," and any further increase endangers civilization.

The resolution was adopted Saturday at the association's annual convention.

The group urged president Reagan to begin negotiations with the Soviet Union in order to determine what would constitute "nuclear parity." The countries should then "cease the future fabrication and distribution of nuclear weapons under an agreement that allows acceptable on-site inspection by both nations," the resolution said.

The measure will be presented to the 126,000-member organization's national convention in Puerto Rico in June.

Dear Abby

Keeping the faith can stunt spirit

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I was amazed at your response to the 15-year-old girl who felt guilty for dating out of her faith against her parents' wishes. She said she was proud of her heritage and had no intentions of marrying out of her faith, but at 15 she wasn't considering marriage.

You replied: "You will avoid a lot of possible heartache by dating only boys you may one day marry. The heart doesn't care what the head is thinking."

I deplore your bigoted point of view. If we limit our dating only to people who share the same religion, philosophy and political views, we will not grow or learn. We need to associate with people who make us think and question our own beliefs.

Children should be taught to choose their friends for their character, worthiness, intelligence and caring rather than for their religion, color of skin, social status, style of dress or any other basis for prejudice.

There are many reasons why people date a member of the opposite sex, Abby. It isn't always a prelude to romance and marriage.

— DISAPPOINTED IN YOU

DEAR DISAPPOINTED: Move over. Many others were also disappointed. Read on for a letter from someone who agreed with my "bigoted" point of view:

DEAR ABBY: I'm glad you advised that 15-year-old against dating boys of a different religion if she had no intentions of marrying out of her faith.

I was raised in a strict Baptist home, but dated boys I knew I could not marry.

I fell deeply in love with a Jewish boy, but I married someone else.

That was over 30 years ago, and I still dream of my first love. Now I wish I had either married him or not set myself up to fall in love with a man I could not marry.

— I REMEMBER MOREY

DEAR ABBY: My mother always used to ripen tomatoes quickly by setting them on the windowsill with the "belly-button side" UP, so that's the way I've always done it.

A friend recently told me that tomatoes ripen faster if they are placed with the belly-button side DOWN. Who is right?

— SANDRA

DEAR SANDRA: It makes no difference which side is up. To ripen tomatoes quickly, place them in a brown paper bag, with the top closed.

DEAR ABBY: Please tell "Honest Amy," who gives her telephone number to men just to avoid hurting their feelings, then ducks them when they call, that it's cruel and dishonest to give a man hope when none exists.

There's nothing worse than having your hopes built up at the first meeting, then getting the runaround when you phone the lady for a date.

When I ask a girl for her phone number, a polite but honest, "Thanks for asking, but the chemistry is just not right for me," would be perfectly acceptable.

Disappointing? Of course, but I have nothing but respect for women who are honest enough to let me know immediately what my chances are.

— APPRECIATES HONESTY IN ALASKA

DEAR APPRECIATES: I'll bet you do. Especially when the nights are six months long.

The future site of her education is in doubt for Dena. Without new classmates, her school will be closed.

Tiny school may be closed for lack of students

One teacher teaches two. . .

O'NEIL BASIN, Nev. — It has been almost a month since Edythe Corum's brass bell rang across the lonely expanses of O'Neil Basin.

Relying on ridgetops and sagebrush for acoustics, the notes used to signal the end of recess for pupils at the one-room elementary school on the Nevada desert southwest of Contact. But when enrollment suddenly dropped from eight children to two last month, the bell lost its purpose. Now, Corum summons her class simply by telling Travis Agee and Dena Smith that it's time to come indoors.

Even that may not be necessary next year, since O'Neil School will close unless more children move to ranches in the area.

For now, only two coats hang on the rack with hooks for 10, and playground games present little challenge for Travis and Dena. As an eighth-grader, Travis is a pretty fair shot with a basketball. Only time will help pint-sized Dena, who is in the first grade.

Their six former classmates were from two ranch-hand families. Both families moved for other job opportunities. So for the moment, at least, ranchers' common concerns about grazing conditions and market prices are sharing a platform with the pressing search for ranch-hands with kids.

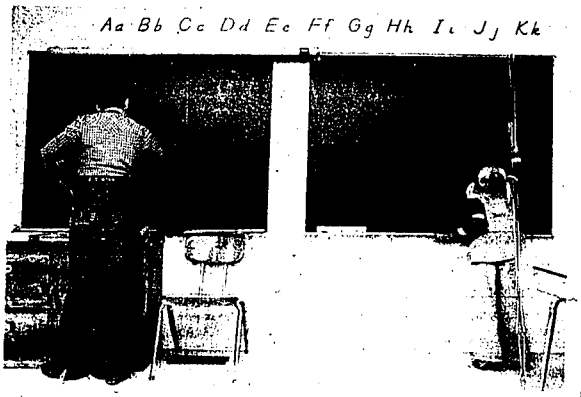

Since Travis will attend high school in Wells next year, at least two elementary-school youngsters must move to the area for the school to remain open. And, once it closes, the Elko County School District will require an enrollment of seven to reopen the trailer that serves as O'Neil Basin's country classroom.

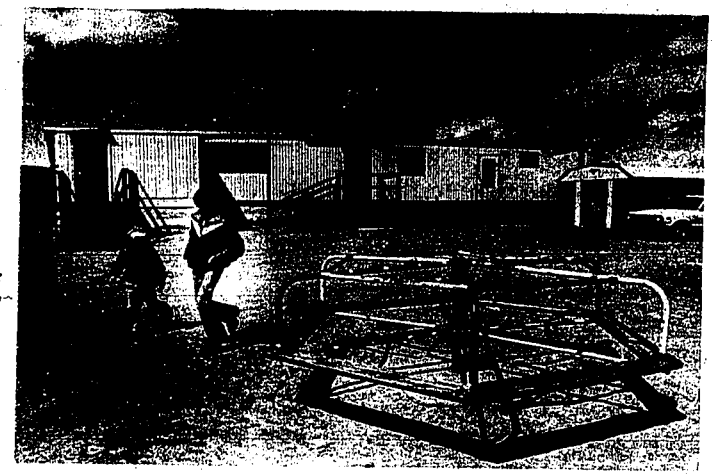

"Disastrous!" is the way Dena's mother, Jolyne Smith, describes the possible closure. But hurdles are nothing new to people who live in a desert hollow, where snow can render roads impassable and wind collapses outbuildings as though they were constructed of cards. If O'Neil School closes, Smith says with resignation, the family will move to Wells so that Dena can attend the second grade. Members of the extended Smith clan will continue to mind the Cottonwood Ranch.

The scenario in the blustery basin that 14 families call home is not unique in the Elko County School District, which encompasses an area larger than New England.

At one time, 90 rural schools dotted Elko County's 17,000 square miles. Now, the district operates seven, two of them in the gambling communities of Jackpot and Wendover, where enrollments are surging. At the other end of the Recess poses a problem for classmates seven years apart but Dena and Travis usually manage a game of kick ball (right). Inside, each has the advantage of being able to work at their own blackboard.

Teacher Edythe Corum wasn't sure she'd like the rural life.

City-grown teacher worried it wasn't for her

Corum would miss one-room school

By SUSAN GALLAGHER
Times-News writer

O'NEIL BASIN, Nev. — The first time that a young schoolteacher from urban California gazed at the stark vastness of O'Neil Basin, she told herself she never could live there.

In the desert basin, human inhabitants are few, and together with their trappings, they command little significance amid the miles of sage-covered land and the peaks and bluffs that embrace it all. On a hot day last July, Edythe Corum figured she was no exception as she stood outside of O'Neil School and tried to comprehend the unspoiled enormity of her surroundings.

Accompanied by a school district administrator, Corum had come to the ranching country of northeastern Nevada to ponder the pleasures and perils of teaching at a one-room school consisting of a trailer overshadowed by a rocky promontory.

"I felt quite sure that I could never survive in such a place," she later wrote in her diary. "I felt that I had to tell Mr. Elser (the administrator) 'no,' but I couldn't bring myself to after he'd invested so many hours in driving me out to this God-forsaken place." So, Corum said she would think things over for a week.

Today, she lives in the back rooms of the trailer and holds class in the front. Her mail is delivered twice a week, her groceries only half that often. And the 28-year-old woman who questioned her ability to cope with isolation often revels in it.

"There is a part of America that's tucked away," says Corum, who spent a summer working in the New York City slums. "This is one of those places."

With sunlight bouncing off the metal of the trailer-turned-schoolhouse and a car parked in front, Corum's situation isn't entirely a throwback to the life of a frontier schoolteacher. But similarities certainly exist.

In the lone classroom, she's instructed eight children, who became almost as close as a family. But six of the youngsters moved away with the advent of spring, leaving Travis Agee, 14, and Dena Smith, 7, as the only pupils.

With just two children, life at O'Neil School is somewhat less spirited, but it goes on, starting with a daily flag ceremony conducted by Travis and Dena.

The protocol of school life prevails in scaled-down form at O'Neil Basin, and the casual but equally tradition-bound rituals of Western living thrive at sprawling ranches with names like Twin Meadows, Home and Cottonwood.

The schoolteacher from Fresno, Calif., has experienced her share of those rituals, whether they consist of innoculating calves or huddling in front of a neighbor's wood-burning stove after a winter storm whipped the rural power system out of service.

Such experiences were entirely foreign to Corum last September, when she arrived at O'Neil Basin to embark on the 1981-82 school year. Recalling that day, she wrote in her diary: "I fixed canned beans and frozen spinach for dinner and sat outside on my trailer steps to eat it, gazing at the rugged buttes of sheer rock and sage in front of me.

Johnny Horizon cleanup to make sweep over county

TWIN FALLS — There is still time to take part in the annual Johnny Horizon Day countywide clean-up campaign, which will take place Saturday, May 1.

Darrell Helder, the director of parks and solid waste for the county, says that anyone wishing to assist in the event should go to the old hospital building off Addison Avenue West before 9 a.m. Saturday, and they will be put to work.

Anyone who has not been assigned to a work team and work area already will get an assignment at that time.

Persons in outlying areas of the county should contact their community chairman for a work assignment.

The chairmen are: Helder in Twin Falls, 734-3300; in Kimberly, Dick Stafford, 423-5197, and Bill Malone, 423-4151; Leon McCalmon, Hansen area, 423-5618; Herb Thorne, Murtaugh area, 432-5261; Velma Hopkins, Buhl area, 543-5308; the Rev. Larry Rankin, Castleford area, 537-6946; Paul Patterson, Filer area, 326-4277; Ben Horst, Clover area, 326-4106; and Clark Kleinkopf, Rogerson area, 733-0548.

All county landfills will be open free that day.

The 13th annual Johnny Horizon Day is sponsored by the Twin Falls Lions Club, the Bureau of Land Management and the county.

Times-News wins Gem press awards

SUN VALLEY — The Times-News won five awards Saturday in the annual Idaho Press Club contest, open to newspapers and radio and television stations throughout the state.

In writing categories, former Times-News managing editor Neil Hopp received a second-place award for editorials, while sports editor Marv Clemons and reporter Steve Lipson each earned third-place honors.

Clemons won his award for a feature story about a Raft River High School football player, James Koyle, who suffered a permanent spine injury that paralyzed him from the neck down.

Lipson received his award in specialty writing, for his work on our quarterly "Economic Indicators," which takes an in-depth look at the Magic Valley's economy every three months. The latest version appeared in Sunday's Times-News.

In addition, photo editor Bob Delashmutt earned a third-place award in news photography, and in the typography category — a newspaper's appearance — The Times-News received a first-place award, tying for the honor with the Lewiston Morning Tribune.

The awards were presented Saturday evening at the Elkhorn Village Inn.

Messenger makes bid for assessor

JEROME — A man who retired six weeks ago as an appraiser in the Jerome County assessor's office will run as the lone Democratic candidate for assessor.

Edward Messenger of Jerome, nominated by his party's central committee, says he has obtained the necessary signatures to run for the office of assessor in Jerome County.

Republican candidates for the post in the May 25 primary election are Terri Jones and Marjorie Dubois. Assessor Bill Kersey is not seeking re-election.

For the last 14 years, Messenger has worked as an appraiser for numerous Idaho counties. Prior to becoming an appraiser, he was in the construction business for 30 years.

As far as could be determined, Messenger was the only candidate at the county level in the Magic Valley to be selected by a central committee to run in the primary. The deadline for central committee selections was Thursday. The filing deadlines for individuals seeking nomination in the primary was April 7.

Idaho student wins HST scholarship

MOSCOW (UPI) — A sophomore business major at the University of Idaho is one of 50 students from across the country selected to receive the Harry S. Truman scholarship, school officials said.

Clare Henriksen, Annandale, Va., will receive the scholarship, which carries a $5,000 stipend for each of four years. It is the first time in four years that a UI student has received the award, officials said.

roster, an exodus of miners and their families has forced closure of Victoria School near the quiet Victoria copper mine about 100 miles southeast of Elko.

O'Neil School has weathered enrollment declines before, such as in 1978-79, when the number of children dropped to three. The 1962-63 and 1969-70 school years both brought peaks of 19 pupils.

While finding students has been a problem from time to time, the same can't be said about teachers, at least in recent years, according to the principal who supervises several rural schools in Elko County. Don Elser says that lately, the district has received a lot of applications from the Midwest, where unemployment apparently is sending people west in search of opportunity. The teaching-credentialed spouses of job-seekers are among the people who keep Elko County supplied with employment applications, he says. Enticements include relatively high salaries.

In addition to a healthy supply of teachers eliminating any difficulty in filling rural vacancies, Elser says the younger generation of educators includes people intrigued by the idea of a stint at a remote school.

"I think that now, there are more people like Edy (Corum) who want to experience the style of life and the freedom," says Elser, who carries out a district policy that requires teachers to visit country schools as part of the application process. Despite changing attitudes, the principal observes that one look is all it takes for some teachers to say, "I'm not interested."

Teachers who do take the jobs can work a maximum of three consecutive years at one school. That allows variety both for the teacher and for children who spend grades one through eight in the same one-room school.

Whether a teacher is in her first or third year at a country school, the logistics of educating children of varying ages in one classroom are not simple. The school district provides instruction schedules, but success ultimately hinges on the teacher's organizational skills, Elser says.

Teaching children of mixed ages wasn't new to Corum, whose work in California included a class with three grades combined. Now, of course, the demand for organization is minimal, with Corum essentially tutoring Travis and Dena.

Educators say tests show that graduates of one-room elementary schools often enter high school with sharper skills than their city counterparts possess. Individualized attention prevails at a school attended by just a handful of children, and educators say other bonuses include a heightened sense of cooperation and sharing.

Pronounced discipline problems are rare, Elser says, and he attributes that largely to that fact that pupils in rural schools usually live on ranches where they have chores and the opportunity to develop a work ethic.

On the other hand, difficult adjustments can confront rural children entering secondary schools; there are occasional rivalries among siblings in the same classroom; and one-room schools lack such amenities as team sports and orchestras.

Libraries and other resources are hours away, but the Elko County School District's bookmobile visits O'Neil School regularly, offering both reading material and a bit of companionship.

And later this spring, visitors at the school will include a photographer who intends to shoot pictures of the class of 1982's remaining students — all two of them.

Teacher

and wondering vaguely what life would be like here." The gusting wind awakened her that night.

A week later, Corum met her class: Travis, grade 8; Nicolas, grade 5; Adolfo and Jesse, grade 4; Tina and Emma, grade 3; Margarita, grade 2; and Dena, grade 1.

Indian Summer enveloped O'Neil Basin, and Corum and the children established their foundations of friendship and learning.

As the school year progressed, it included a Christmas program that attracted practically everyone in the basin. And on a grim note, winter brought Travis a bout with blood poisoning that could have been fatal. Anxiety beset his classmates and teacher as he lay in a Salt Lake City hospital.

Regardless of whether the O'Neil Basin ranchers are able to hire family men and keep the school open, Corum wants to teach at a "town school" in Elko County next year. With the exception of her six pupils moving away, her experience at O'Neil Basin has been rewarding and comfortable, she says. And there lies part of her desire to leave.

"I like the isolation, but I also miss civilization," she says. "This has been great for one year. It's been a novelty, but the novelty is wearing off. I think I would become too complacent, too set in my ways, if I stayed."

Yet, she might like to teach at O'Neil School again one of these years, and she definitely will return for a visit.

"I'm going to miss this place. It's been good to me."

Solar workshop set for Hailey

HAILEY — A day-long workshop on passive solar heating will be held Saturday, May 8, at Wood River High School in Hailey.

Concurrent sessions will be held to offer information of interest both to persons seeking general information and to those wishing more technical advice, according to the Idaho Energy Extension Service, the sponsor of the workshop.

Information and a detailed agenda can be obtained from: Southwest Idaho Energy Extension Service, at the College of Idaho, 2112 Cleveland Blvd., Caldwell, 83605, or by calling 459-5609.

Crash kills girl

BLACKFOOT (UPI) — A 16-year-old girl died and two other Blackfoot residents were hospitalized Sunday with injuries sustained in a head-on traffic accident Saturday night.

Idaho State Police Cpl. Jack Anderson, Pocatello, said Tina Hawley of Blackfoot died in the accident on U.S. Highway 26 one-half mile west of Blackfoot at 9:15 p.m. Saturday.

A vehicle driven by Jose Pelayo, 26, Blackfoot, crossed the center line and struck a car driven by Vickie Jo Jensen, 16, Blackfoot, Anderson said.

NY fires Lemon

Michael back at helm again

NEW YORK (UPI) — Bob Lemon, promised by George Steinbrenner last December that he would manage the New York Yankees for the entire 1982 season "no matter what," was fired Sunday after serving only three weeks and replaced by Gene Michael.

It marked the second time Lemon was fired as Yankee manager and the eighth managerial change for the Yankees since Steinbrenner bought the club on Jan. 3, 1973.

Michael, who managed the team last season but was replaced by Lemon on Sept. 6, will take over the team immediately, beginning Tuesday night against California at Yankee Stadium.

Steinbrenner personally notified Lemon of the switch he was making shortly after the Yankees snapped a three-game losing slide by salvaging the final contest of a four-game series with the Detroit Tigers, 3-1, at Yankee Stadium.

As was the case when Steinbrenner relieved him of the managership the first time in 1979, Lemon was assured he could remain with the Yankees as long as he likes.

"You have a lifetime contract with us, as far as I'm concerned," said Steinbrenner, explaining to Lemon he could remain with the club as a chief scout, take another managing job or retire, whatever he wished.

Lemon accepted the news of his firing mildly. He showed no resentment whatsoever and even joked with Steinbrenner about his departure.

"Well, at least I'm going out on a winning note," he said, referring to the victory over the Tigers.

"I know I made a promise you would finish the season and I hope you don't hold that against me," Steinbrenner told him. "I just felt something had to be done to get us going."

"Don't worry about it," Lemon reassured him. "I didn't take what you said to heart and I understand you have to do what you think is best."

With the Yankees languishing in fifth place in the American League East and having looked flat and sluggish in winning only five of their first 13 games, Steinbrenner reached the decision to change managers late Saturday night.

He conferred with his front office staff of Bill Bergesch, vice president, baseball operations; Cedric Tallis, executive vice president, and Lou Saban, club president, before the game to inform them of his decision to replace Lemon.

Originally, the news release announcing the managerial change was to carry Bergesch's name but Steinbrenner insisted he wanted it under his name. If someone was to catch any flak over the firing of Lemon, he wanted to be the one to get it, he said.

"It's the toughest decision I've ever had to make," said Steinbrenner. "If you have to place the blame on the team's poor showing on anyone, it should not be placed on the manager so much as it should be on the shoulders of the players who are not performing to their capacities. I felt a change will get them going.

"I don't look on this as a firing," he went on. "I look upon this as a changing of positions within the organization. That's really what it is because Lem is going to stay with us in another capacity. It isn't as if I'm kissing somebody goodbye."

Lemon took the whole thing philosophically, even coming to the club's press room afterwards for a farewell beer with one of his coaches, Mike Ferraro.

"It's just like 1979," he said. "I was going to be out anyway then, too, and 'Stick' (Michael) was going to replace me the same as he was going to do next season. I don't hold any animosity."

Steinbrenner had said last December at the baseball meetings in Hollywood, Fla., that Lemon would serve out this season "no matter how bad the team does" and that Michael would replace him as manager for the 1983 season.

"Lem took the whole thing just great," Steinbrenner said. "You know the great guy he is. He told me he never intended to hold me to it when I said he would stay on the whole year. It only goes to prove you should never say never."

Bullet Jeff Ruland tries to clear Boston's Robert Parish from his path during Celtics' win

Celtics, Philadelphia triumph in openers

By United Press International

The Philadelphia 76ers and the Boston Celtics, both well accustomed to the postseason, had successful openings Sunday in the quarterfinals of the NBA playoffs.

The 76ers, behind Julius Erving's 34 points and a late run of eight straight points, beat the Milwaukee Bucks 125-122 at the Spectrum. Game 2 of the best-of-seven series is Wednesday night in Philadelphia.

The Celtics, showing the effects of a week's layoff, rallied behind 21 points by M.L. Carr for a 109-91 decision over the Washington Bullets in the other semifinal series of the Eastern Conference. Game 2 is in Boston Wednesday night.

76ers 125, Bucks 122

The 76ers broke open a close game over a 1:42 stretch in the fourth quarter. With Philadelphia down 111-110 with 5:18 to go, Maurice Cheeks made a layup off a steal, Erving and Caldwell Jones scored on offensive rebounds and Bobby Jones sank two free throws to give the 76ers a 118-111 lead with 3:36 remaining.

The Bucks cut it to 124-122 on a basket by Marques Johnson with nine seconds left. Milwaukee still had a chance to tie after Erving made 1-of-2 free throws with four seconds remaining but Robert Smith passed up a 3-point attempt to get closer to the basket.

"I thought he knew (the score)," Milwaukee coach Don Nelson said. "But for some reason he was reluctant to shoot. Actually he's a good shooter from there. But not making our free throws hurt us. If we had made them, we win the game."

Andrew Toney added 26 points for the 76ers and Caldwell Jones had 16 rebounds. Mickey Johnson led Milwaukee with 28 points and Marques Johnson added 27 and Sidney Moncrief 23.

Celtics 109, Bullets 91

In Boston, the Celtics needed a third-quarter lift from Carr and Nate Archibald. Carr had 8 of his 21 points and Archibald 8 of his 12 during the period in which Washington shot just 23 percent from the floor as the Celtics took the lead for good.

"I had the ball going for me," said Carr. "I take what the defense gives me. Obviously, their scouting reports didn't look at the outside. They've been sitting back and when they sit back, I take 'em."

The Celtics also received a boost from Rick Robey. He who played the last 15 minutes in place of ineffective Robert Parish and scored 10 points while taking control underneath.

Legends

Snead, January give show to remember

AUSTIN, Texas (UPI) — Don January and Sam Snead reserved one of their most legendary performances for the Legends of Golf Sunday.

Enjoying a profitable walk in the sunshine, January and Snead turned in their third straight sensational performance Sunday in recording the lowest winning score in the five-year history of the $450,000 event — a 27-under-par total of 183.

"All I can say," said January, "is that Sam Snead is a marvel. For a man who will be 70 next month to play like he did this week is really something.

"I don't think I've ever played in a team tournament in which the two players melded that well. More times than not we both had shots at birdies and when one of us might be out of the hole the other one was up there for a birdie or an easy par.

"You don't often see two players play this good for three straight days."

Snead, 69, and January, 52, thus shared first prize money of $100,000 by lapping a field of the leading "seniors" players in the world.

After rounds of 62 and 60 on Friday and Saturday, Snead and January ended the rain-shortened tournament with a nine-under 61 over the stillsoggy Onion Creek Club course. The opening rounds of the Legends were plagued by chilly, damp conditions, but the sun came out Sunday and temperatures quickly rose into the 80s.

Snead, who has won 136 tournaments in all parts of the world during a 48-year career, and January, who has won both of the seniors tournaments conducted this year, finished 12 shots ahead of three teams tied for second place.

The three-way deadlock for second was made up of the teams of Roberto DeVicenzo-Bob Goalby, defending champions Bob Rosburg-Gene Littler and Bob Toski-Chin Sei Ha. Each team won $35,000.

DeVicenzo and Goalby shot a 64 Sunday, a round that included one nine-hole stretch in which the team took only 27 shots. Rosburg and Littler finished with a 64 and the Toski-Chin Sei Ha team shot a 65.

Alone in fifth place was the team of Arnold Palmer-Dow Finsterwald, which used six birdies by Palmer for a 63 and a 54-hole total of 196.

Snead and January broke the Legends' scoring record by four shots. Until Sunday, the lowest winning total had been 23-under, a score turned in by Art Wall and Tommy Bolt over 54 holes in 1980 and by Rosburg and Littler over 72 holes last year.

The winning team had an eight-shot lead going into the final day and immediately erased any hope of a close contest by rolling in birdies on the first two holes. Of the nine birdies they made Sunday, Snead made five and January four. For the week Snead was credited with 14 birdies and January 13. They played the three rounds without making a bogey.

Scott, Jarolimek top CSI awards

TWIN FALLS — Basketball awards highlighted the CSI Athletic Banquet Saturday night — mostly because the other three major sports are still in season.

Men's Coach Dave Campbell and women's mentor Lloyd Hardesty presented the awards, which were voted on by the team members.

George Scott, who signed last Friday with the University of New Mexico, was named the outstanding sophomore and the freshman prize went to guard Gerald Kennedy. Brad Dey, Jerome graduate, was voted the Vern Riddle award, which goes to the hardest working player on the team.

In women's play, Hardesty presented the most inspirational award to Arco sophomore Melissa Barter and the MVP to Filer's Tammy Jarolimek.

Booster Randy King, who has been on the sidelines throughout the history of CSI basketball, received a special honor, being voted the Al Ralph Award by the CSI boosters. The award, named for one of the original CSI supporters, goes to a booster who is felt to have contributed consistently to the athletic program.

Track Coach Karl Kleinkopf noted sprinter Mark Monaco and high jumper Julie Harrington have qualified for nationals this spring. But any track awards will be settled at completion of the regional meet in two weeks.

Rodeo Coach Shawn Davis said the women's team has clinched a berth to participate for team honors in the national rodeo. He noted the men's team is riding No. 1 in the Rocky Mountain Region chase and while he felt they would end up either first or second, there was a chance the Eagles could be beaten out.

Baseball Coach Jim Walker noted his team's critical moments begin today when Ricks College comes to Twin Falls to begin a four-game, two-day stay. He said if his Eagles can win the best-of-eight series with Ricks, CSI would host the regional playoffs in mid-May.

Special speaker for the event was Charles Spoonhauer, University of Nebraska assistant basketball coach.

Trautman's plan to make NFL simple — 'let me hit'

BOISE — Randy Trautman's plan of attack is simple and to the point.

"If they let me on the field I can compete," the former Boise State defensive tackle says. "Just let me hit. I can hit with the best of them."

Trautman wasn't talking about a grudge clash with Idaho State or another shot at Eastern Kentucky. He's one of four Broncos waiting for Tuesday's National Football League draft.

The 6-2, 250-pounder figures he'll be drafted somewhere in the middle rounds of the annual NFL talent hunt that starts Tuesday and concludes Wednesday.

Rick Woods, BSU's all-American strong safety, is likely to be the highest Bronco selected while wide receiver Kipp Bedard and tight end Duane Dlouhy are also possible draftees.

Woods, much like the NFL clubs, is being low-key about the draft. He acknowledges that he may be selected as early as the third round — a selection that could mean be a potential starting role and a likely six-figure contract.

"Rick is pretty quiet," Trautman said. "But I've been talking to most of the scouts that come in here and a guy from Dallas said Rick is one of the best defensive backs available in the country."

Woods is from Boise and Trautman hails from Caldwell. The two are almost certain to be drafted during Tuesday's first round, if there is such a thing as a guarantee in the NFL draft.

"A lot of teams have shown interest," Woods said, naming a list of nearly a dozen NFL clubs. "But they don't say much. I'd like to go to the New York Jets because they are looking really good and could use some defensive backs. You'd like to go to a team where you can play and to a team that can make the playoffs. The Jets were in the playoffs last year."

Woods and Trautman have both attended camps where scouts and coaches check them out.

"I went to the BLESTO (d scouting combine) camp in Detroit," Woods said. "They really put you through the wringer there. You feel just like a piece of meat."

Woods' performance in two post-season all-star games probably upgraded his draft chances. In the Olympia Gold Bowl he deflected two passes and intercepted two aerials. With several professional scouts on hand, Woods was noticed.

"Ideally, I'd like to go sometime before the third round is over," the 6-1, 205-pounder said.

Woods is likely to get an opportunity at returning punts and kickoffs, one of his specialties at Boise State.

"Rookies are pretty expendable, so I figure just about any team will give me a shot at returns," he said. "Some of the teams have specifically mentioned it."

Woods and Trautman have signed Steve Zeigen of Spring Valley, Calif., as their agent.

"He's mainly been handling free agents, but he's very outgoing and I got to know him in a short period of time," Woods said. "I trust him and he's got several good contacts. Because he's easy to get along with and outgoing, the clubs seem to like him."

Zeigen will receive four percent of whatever deal he can negotiate for Woods and Trautman.

While Woods appears to have a solid future in the NFL, Trautman is in a must-prove situation. Both will know their status much better after Tuesday's transactions.

Trautman isn't picky about his possible professional future.

"I'd like to play on the West Coast since that's where I'm from," Trautman said. "But I'll play any place. I've heard some talk of putting me at offensive guard or linebacker. I don't care where they put me. I want to play.

"Just let me hit to take the aggression out. I may not be a 4.0 student, but I got a brain in me and I'll figure a way to get there."

Trautman isn't worried about six-figure contracts, he just wants to make the team — any team.

"Hey, the lowest salary in the NFL is around something like $40,000," he said. "That beats the couple thousand I make on this scholarship."

The threat of a strike doesn't seem to bother either member of BSU's 1981 National Championship team.

"I talked with Steve and he said a strike would hurt us," Trautman said. "But I don't see how. I think it would give more rookies a chance to play."

Woods and Trautman are roommates and Tuesday they'll be in their room in front of the tube watching ESPN, which will televise the draft live from New York.

"I watched a lot of it last year," Woods said. "It was pretty boring."

With their future on the line, neither is going to give this year's draft telecast bad reviews.

Randolph's HR stops Yanks' skid, but doesn't save boss

By United Press International

American

Willie Randolph's heroics came a bit too late for Bob Lemon.

Randolph hit a tie-breaking home run with one out in the seventh inning Sunday, helping the New York Yankees top the Detroit Tigers' 3-1, but not before Lemon's fate as Yankee manager had been sealed.

The victory, which ended a three-game losing streak and was the first home win for New York this season, came amid strong indications that Lemon's job was in jeopardy. The rumors proved to be true, and Sunday night, it was announced that Gene Michael would return as manager.

Shane Rawley, who relieved emergency starter Rudy May to open the sixth, improved his record to 1-0 with Rich Gossage pitching the ninth to record his second save and 100th as a Yankee.

Randolph hit a 2-2 pitch from loser Milt Wilcox, 1-2, over the right field fence, just beyond the reach of a leaping Chet Lemon. Randolph helped the Yankees take a 1-0 lead in the third. He singled, stole second and moved to third on walks to Ken Griffey and Oscar Gamble. He scored on a fielder's choice grounder by Dave Winfield.

The Yankees added an insurance run in the eighth. Winfield led off with a single and moved to second on a sacrifice by Dent. After Dave Revering was intentionally walked, Rick Cerone singled in Winfield, knocking out Wilcox in favor of Kevin Saucier, who struck out Larry Milbourne for the second out. Elias Sosa relieved and got Randolph to fly out to center.

The Tigers tied it 1-1 in the sixth without a hit. Lemon walked and advanced to second when shortstop Bucky Dent mishandled Enos Cabell's ground ball. Kirk Gibson sacrificed the runners and Larry Herndon was walked intentionally to fill the bases. John Wockenfuss then hit a sacrifice fly to right.

Yankee third baseman Graig Nettles left the game after the fifth inning. He dove in an attempt to catch Alan Trammell's second-inning double and injured the thumb on his glove hand.

Orioles 2, White Sox 1

At Baltimore, Rick Dempsey smashed a two-run homer in the fifth inning led the Orioles. Dempsey was also on the receiving end of shortstop Bob Bonner's throw in the ninth that nailed the potential tying run. Loser Steve Trout, 1-2, held the Orioles hitless until Eddie Murray, the American League's leading hitter, opened the fifth by lining an infield single off Trout's upper body. Two outs later, Dempsey, lofted a 1-1 pitch into the left field seats.

Red Sox 5, Blue Jays 4

At Toronto, Rick Miller went 3-for-5, including an RBI double that drove in Glenn Hoffman with the go-ahead run in the 12th inning to lead the Red Sox. Mark Clear, who came on in the eighth inning, evened his record at 1-1. John Mayberry belted two homers for Toronto.

Royals 6, Indians 3

At Kansas City, Lee May hit a two-run homer and George Brett a solo shot to carry Larry Gura, 2-1, and the Royals. Kansas City took a 4-2 lead off Bert Blyleven, 2-1, with an unearned run in the fourth. Toby Harrah's second error of the game in the fifth on Amos Otis's grounder enabled the Royals to put the game away with two more unearned runs.

Brewers 11, Rangers 6

At Arlington, Tex., Cecil Cooper, the league's No. 2 hitter, drove in three runs with two doubles and a single and Rollie Fingers pitched two scoreless innings of relief to lead the Brewers. Robin Yount had four hits and Don Money and Jim Gantner each homered to contribute to Milwaukee's 16-hit attack as the Brewers won their fifth straight game.

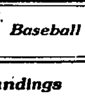

Angels 5, A's 1

At Anaheim, Calif., Bobby Grich drove in three runs with a double and a single and Brian Downing hit his seventh homer of the season to power the Angels. Mike Witt limited the A's to six hits and one run in his seven innings before Don Aase got the last six outs for his third save.

Mariners 5, Twins 4 (11)

At Seattle, Todd Cruz, who went 4-for-4, belted a home run leading off the bottom of the 11th inning to boost the Mariners. It was the second straight game Cruz had produced a game-winning hit. Cruz socked a 1-0 pitch off Terry Felton, 0-2, into the center-field bleachers. Bill Caudill, who went just 1-3 of an inning, gained credit for the victory. Rookie Kent Hrbek socked his league-leading eighth homer for Minnesota.

'Yanks' changes

NEW YORK (UPI) — A chronology of Yankee managers since George Steinbrenner bought the Yankees Jan. 3, 1973:

Sept 30, 1973 — Ralph Houk resigns after 11 years on the job in two separate turns.

November, 1973 — Dick Williams is named manager, but Charlie Finley refuses to release him from his Oakland A's contract.

December, 1973 — Bill Virdon is named manager.

Aug. 2, 1975 — Virdon is fired and replaced by Billy Martin.

July 24, 1978 — Martin resigns under fire in Kansas City after having said of Reggie Jackson and Steinbrenner, "one's a born liar and the other's convicted."

July 25, 1978 — Bob Lemon replaces Martin.

July 29, 1978 — Yankees announce, on Old Timers Day, that Martin will return as manager beginning the 1980 season.

June 18, 1979 — Lemon is fired and Martin returns earlier than expected.

October, 1979 — Martin is fired after a public altercation with a marshmallow salesman in Minnesota.

Oct. 29, 1979 — Dick Howser is named manager.

Nov. 21, 1980 — Howser, after winning 103 games and a division title as a rookie manager, but losing the AL championship series in three games, announces his "resignation." Gene Michael is named manager.

Sept. 6, 1981 — Michael is fired in the aftermath of remarks made nine days earlier about Steinbrenner. Lemon is named to replace Michael.

Dec. 6, 1981 — Lemon is named as manager for the 1982 season but the Yankees announce that Michael will return to manage the club in 1983.

April 25, 1982 — Lemon is fired after Yankees get off to a sluggish start and is replaced by Michael.

Cards best Rx for Carlton

National

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — An old nemesis ended the St. Louis Cardinal's 12-game winning streak Sunday.

Steve Carlton, who pitched his first major league game in a St. Louis uniform in 1965, brought his record to 31-10 against his old teammates as he pitched the Philadelphia Phillies to an 8-4 decision.

The 37-year-old left-hander, winner of three National League Cy Young awards, had a three-hitter after eight innings but had to leave during a three-run Cardinal rally in the ninth.

A surprising 0-4 going into Sunday's game, Carlton still had the full support of Pat Corrales, his manager, and Bo Diaz, his catcher.

"He has been excellent his last three starts," said Corrales. "He had real good stuff today."

"His stuff has been as good as it was this spring when he was unhittable," agreed Diaz. "All he needs is a little support like we gave him today."

The Phillies' support began in the fourth inning when successive singles by Ivan DeJesus, Pete Rose and Gary Matthews accounted for the game's first run.

Three more runs scored in the fifth. Julio Franco walked and took third on a single by Carlton. Bob Dernier singled home Franco and DeJesus drove home Carlton with a single. When the Cardinals ran down DeJesus between first and second, Dernier scored.

Corrales was especially happy about Dernier's run. "When you get some men on you can utilize your speed," he said. "Dernier is a guy who can make things happen. He has also adapted to playing right field very well. He has been a center fielder for his whole minor league career."

Dernier also walked to set off a four-run Phillies' eighth. Before the inning was over Rose and Manny Trillo had sacrifice flies, Matthews an RBI single and Garry Maddox a run-producing double.

Carlton pitched out of a no-hit, bases-loaded jam in the sixth. Ozzie Smith opened with a double and took third on a single by pinch-hitter Mike Ramsey. Lonnie Smith then walked to load the bases. Tommy Herr grounded out to score Ozzie Smith but Carlton fanned Keith Hernandez and George Hendrick to end the threat.

"I'm not sure Carlton was as overpowering as sometimes, but he got his strikeouts when he needed them," remarked Cardinal manager Whitey Herzog. "He's a tough pitcher to get behind on and leading off four different innings with walks is no way to play against him."

Pirates 5, Cubs 3

At Chicago, Steve Henderson's pinch hit RBI single capped a four-run fourth inning that helped the Cubs snap a four-game losing streak. Randy Martz, 1-2, pitched the final five innings to earn the victory while starter Rick Rhoden, 0-2, took the loss.

Reds 4, Astros 3 (10)

At Houston, Dave Concepcion's sacrifice fly in the top of the 10th inning scored Ed Milner to lift Cincinnati. Milner reached first on an infield hit when pitcher Randy Moffitt, 0-1, mishandled a dribbler down the third base line. Ron Oester singled to right, moving Milner to third, setting up Concepcion's game-winning fly.

Expos 5, Mets 2

At Montreal, Andre Dawson went 3-for-4 and drove in two runs to carry the Expos. Scott Sanderson, 2-1, worked the first seven innings for Montreal before Jeff Reardon came on to pitch the final two innings and post his third save.

Giants 6, Dodgers 3

At San Francisco, Jeff Leonard's first career grand slam capped a five-run eighth-inning rally that lifted the Giants over Fernando Valenzuela, 2-2, and Los Angeles. The triumph snapped a five-game San Francisco losing streak.

San Diego at Atlanta was rained out.

with 17 points and rookie Frank Johnson had 14.

"Give Boston a lot of credit, but we're a tired team," said Washington's Kevin Grevey. "We need a break, but this isn't the time to take one."

SuperSonics 104, Rockets 83

Over in the Western Conference, Seattle defeated Houston to win its first-round series in three games and advance to the quarters against the San Antonio Spurs. The SuperSonics-Spurs matchup begins Tuesday in Seattle.

Jack Sikma, outplaying Houston's Moses Malone, had 30 points and 17 rebounds to carry the Sonics at home.

Seattle bolted to a 46-30 halftime lead with Houston scoring just 10 points in the second quarter. Houston came no closer than 12 points in the second half.

Gus Williams added 20 points for the Sonics. Malone led Houston with 24 points but was not a factor in the second and third quarters when the Sonic defense sagged on him. Houston, last year's surprise playoff team, had 20 points from Allen Leavell.

Lakers vs. Suns

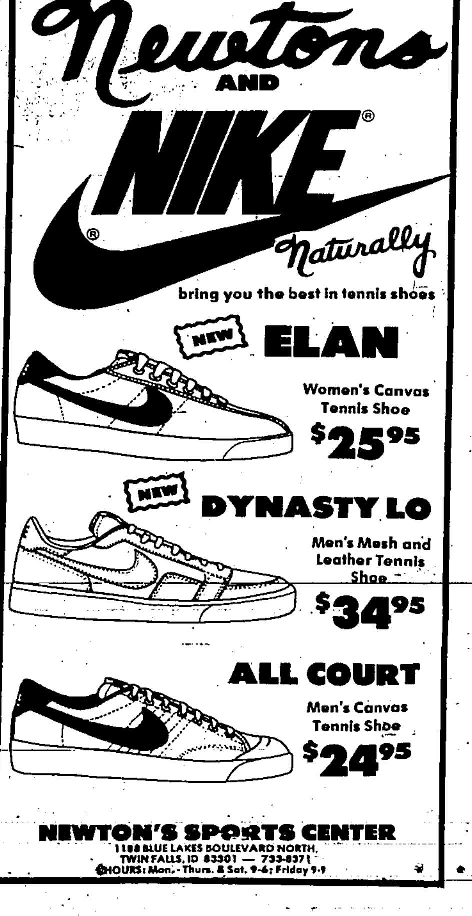

In other quarterfinal pairing, Phoenix meets Los Angeles beginning Tuesday night on the West Coast.

The Suns clinched their mini-series in the final game with a 124-119 road victory on Saturday behind 30 points by Walter Davis and 26 by Dennis Johnson. Davis put Phoenix ahead for good 120-119 with 1:38 left. Johnson added two free throws to win it.

Truck Robinson scored 23 points for the Suns. Denver was paced by Dan Issel with 25 points and Kiki Vandeweghe with 24.

Eagle at 18 lifts Frank, Hanchey to Muny victory

TWIN FALLS — Tracy Frank eagled the par-five 18th hole Sunday to help his team win the Twin Falls Municipal Golf Course two-man best ball tournament.

Frank and Mike Hanchey came from two strokes back for a 36-hole total of 126 to win the tourney over Dr. Chic Cutler and Perry Hanchey.

Frank and Mike Hanchey shot a 60 Sunday after holding fourth place at 66 after Saturday's opening round.

Cutler and Perry Hanchey held the lead Saturday along with two other twosomes — Caldwell's Gordon Crockett and Joe Malay and Twin Falls' Steve Ballard and Kevin Packard. All three groups recorded 64 for the deadlock.

Frank's effort on the final hole prevented a tie for first place.

Barry Espil and Doyle Dugger took low net in the championship flight with a 120.

Twin Falls' golfers Gary Roland and Ray Wight won the first flight low gross at 136 while the second flight was won by Larry Amen and Larry Carlson, also from Twin Falls, at 142. Ilo Aman of Twin Falls and Boise's Dan Leon won the third flight low gross at 147.

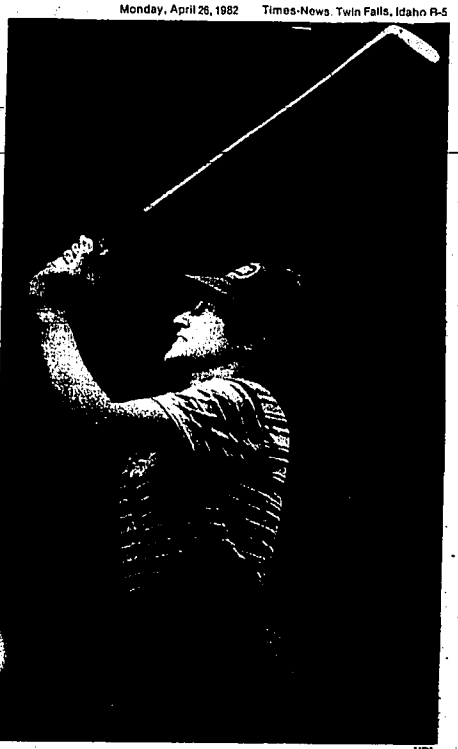

The results:

Championship flight gross — 1. Tracy Frank and Mike Hanchey, both Twin Falls, 126; 2. Dr. Chic Cutler and Perry Hanchey, both Twin Falls, 128. Net — 1. Barry Espil, Hansen, and Doyle Dugger, Twin Falls, 120; 2. (tie) Rick Cook and Ron Boyd, both Twin Falls, and Tom Stanley and Norm Thomas, both Twin Falls, 121.

First flight gross — 1. Gary Roland and Ray Wight, both Twin Falls, 136; 2. Bill Cook and Oz Nelson, both Twin Falls, 139. Net — 1. Nick and Ace Hansen, both Twin Falls, 113; 2. Ray Crumbliss and Dell Timpson, both Twin Falls, 116.

Second flight gross — 1. Larry Amen and Larry Carlson, both Twin Falls, 142; 2. Jack Rasmussen and Art Duncan, both Twin Falls, 144. Net — 1. (tie) Jack Schram and Nick Fisher, both Twin Falls; Spence Falco and Woodward, both Boise, 118.

Third flight gross — 1. Ilo Aman, Twin Falls, and Dan Leon, Boise, 147; 2. Tom McDonald and Keith Ray, both Twin Falls, 150. Net — 1. Joe Martsch and Art Rathe, both Burley, 113; 2. Gale Kleinkopf and Steve Kolar, both Twin Falls, 117.

Patty Sheehan looks relieved after dropping winning putt

Two-foot putt gives Sheehan sudden death win

ORLANDO, Fla. (UPI) — Patty Sheehan sank a two-foot par putt on the fourth hole of sudden death Sunday to defeat Kathy Postlewait and win the $150,000 LPGA Orlando Lady Classic.

Sheehan, who started the day two shots behind leader Postlewait, clinched the victory on the par-3 16th hole — just one hole short of the LPGA record of five playoff holes.

Postlewait, who also led the first and second rounds, just missed an 18-foot putt and had to settle for a bogey. Both players parred the first three holes.

Sheehan and Postlewait ended regulation play with a 54-hole total of seven under 209. Sheehan had a final round two-under 70 and Postlewait fired a one-under par 71.

Sheehan, whose lone victory before Sunday was the Japan Classic last year, took home $22,500 for first place. Postlewait, who was seeking her first win in her nine years on the women's tour, won $14,700.

One shot back at six-under 210 was Dot Germain, who fired a final round 69.

Chris Johnson, who celebrated her 24th birthday Sunday, was two shots off the pace at 211 after carding a 70.

Kathy Hite (65), Jan Stephenson, (70) and Nancy Lopez-Melton (70) were at four-under 212.

Defending champion Beth Daniel shot even par 72 for his final round to finish at 219.

Sheehan, who was among 20 other golfers who had to finish the rain-delayed second round early Sunday before the final windup, collected birdies on the 10th, 11th and 14th holes and then fired a birdie on the 16th hole of regulation play. That put her at eight-under for the tournament and Postlewait, who was then eight-under, missed a three-foot putt for a bogey and dropped to seven-under.

Postlewait had an opportunity to go ahead on the 17th, but missed a birdie putt by inches. Sheehan then dropped to seven-under to tie Postlewait when she bogeyed No. 17.

Both players parred the par-4 18th hole to move into the playoff and finish regulation play at a three day total of 209.

"I feel exhausted, sick and extremely happy," said Sheehan, who played a total of 27 holes of golf Sunday, counting the third round, the four extra holes of sudden death and the remainder of Saturday's second round.

"I was extremely nervous out there and I wasn't sure how to handle it. I learned an awful lot. I was just a rookie but I really wanted this win," she said.

"It was good to pick up my second win. It proves the first one wasn't a fluke," she said. Sheehan, now in her third year on the tour, was in a five-way playoff at last year's Orlando tournament.

"I feel good going into Birmingham, (the next stop on the tour)," she said. "My game is far ahead of what it was last year. I'm more aggressive this year in the playoff than" I was last year.

Postlewait, who has finished second three times but has never won an LPGA event, said she "played well at times but I was disappointed."

"I was elated going into the final round, but I just didn't make the putts," she added.

"I didn't feel well playing this morning," she said, referring to the last four holes of the second round. "I didn't sleep well last night and I wasn't even thinking about the golf. It was like my mind was just racing."

"That was the most golf I've play in one day since I was 13 years old. I will be tired tonight," she said.

Eagles host Ricks today

TWIN FALLS — Greg Steffanich and Tracy Poulson will pitch for College of Southern Idaho today when Ricks College visits for a two-day series of four games.

Today's double-header will start at 1 p.m. at Frontier Field and Tuesday's twinbill will be at 11 a.m.

The four games will constitute the first half of eight district games CSI plays this week. The Eagles, 19-6, visit Treasure Valley Community College Friday and Saturday for the other four games.

The team with the best record in district games will host the district playoffs next month.

Gordon Kerbs, a Burley High product, is slated to pitch today's first game for Ricks, 9-13.

"We beat Gordon last year, but he's not a bad pitcher," CSI Coach Jim Walker said Sunday. "He can be tough."

Ricks, 6-19, figures to be a little thin on pitchers by Tuesday's action, especially if CSI's hitters force the Vikings to go for relief help early. Ronen Rogers, 1-4 this season, is expected to start for Ricks in today's second game.

Quebec upsets Boston

BOSTON (UPI) — Quebec has done it again.

The Nordiques, getting power play goals from Michel Goulet and Dave Pichette and brilliant goaltending from Dan Bouchard, recorded their second straight Stanley Cup upset Sunday night, eliminating the Boston Bruins 2-1 in the seventh and deciding game of the Adams Division finals.

The Nordiques, who earlier eliminated Montreal, winning a deciding game on the road in that series as well, will face the two-time defending champion New York Islanders in the semifinals beginning Tuesday night.

Quebec never trailed in the game and it was on the power play — its only two man-advantage situations in the game — that it capitalized. In addition, Bouchard, who had missed the last five games, was solid in the nets, especially in the first period when the Nordiques were outshot 12-2 but the game remained scoreless.

Pichette, a defenseman, scored the game-winner at 9:39 of the third period while Boston's Terry O'Reilly was serving a charging penalty. Pichette, playing give-and-go with Peter Stastny, moved into the slot and drove a 45-footer over the right shoulder of rookie goalie Mike Moffat, who was sparkling in defeat.

Gant can't be called 'runner-up' any longer

Veteran wins Virginia 500

MARTINSVILLE, Va. (UPI) — Veteran Harry Gant shed his "runner-up" tag Sunday to win his first NASCAR Grand National event, the $204,100 Virginia 500 at Martinsville Speedway.

Gant took the lead from Butch Lindley on the 357th lap and maintained the advantage the rest of the way, lapping Lindley, who finished second. Neil Bonnett took third, Ricky Rudd was fourth and Darrell Waltrip fifth.

Gant drove his battered Buick at an average speed of 75.073 mph for the victory. He takes home $19,500 in first-place money.

In nine years on the Grand National tour, Gant finished second 10 times but had never won a race. His last victory of any kind came in a 300-lap late Model Sportsman event at Asheville, N.C., in April 1980.

A Martinsville Speedway record crowd of 36,500 was on hand for Gant's victory.

The 31-car field was trimmed by more than half by the tight, .525-mile track. Only 13 of the starters were still running at the end of the race.

Pole-sitter Terry Labonte led the first 65 laps, but developed engine trouble and dropped out on the 230th lap. Benny Parsons, who started on the outside pole, did not complete 100 laps as he went out with a mechanical failure.

Gant, who started from the third position, assumed the lead for the first time on the 319th lap. He led the field for 22 laps from that point, lost it and regained it momentarily on lap 342.

When Waltrip blew a tire three laps later, Gant pitted and fell off the pace. Lindley overtook the field, but a six-lap caution period allowed Gant to make up lost time. He passed Lindley on the back stretch on the 357th lap and never trailed. Gant ran the last 155 laps without a pit stop.

The best previous finish of the season for Gant, of Taylorsville, N.C., was fifth in a 500 race in Atlanta. The victory moves Gant into the fourth spot on the Grand National point standing list behind Labonte, Waltrip and Parsons.

There were nine caution flags for a total of 47 laps. There were 14 lead changes among seven drivers. Gant led 167 laps followed by Lindley, who was in front for 163 laps.

"This is a great boost for our team," Gant said. "I hope we can keep going. I sure hope we can win more races. This one took a long time to get.

"With about 100 laps left, I knew something was going to happen. I said to myself 'If it happens, it happens.' I figured I'd just go park and say 'see you next week.' When I saw the checkered flag, I couldn't believe it."

Connors grabs King Classic as Mayer suffers ankle injury

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Jimmy Connors won his second straight tournament and third of the year Sunday, taking the $370,000 Alan King Classic when Gene Mayer injured his ankle and was forced to retire with Connors leading 5-2 in the first set.

Connors' win was worth $60,000. Mayer picked up $30,000.

Connors, the top seed, was in control from the start. His serve was especially sharp and Mayer, who has yet to defeat Connors, did not get a point off the former U.S. Open and Wimbledon champion's serve until the seventh game.

Connors, who won the classic in 1976 and 1977, moved well and his shot placement had Mayer, seeded No. 7, running all over the court.

The injury came with Mayer serving and the score at deuce. A Connors return wrong-footed Mayer, who was leaning in the wrong direction. When he moved to recover he twisted his ankle and dropped to the court. Connors jumped the net and helped Mayer off the court.

It was the second time in the 11-year history of the tournament that the winner won by default in the final. In 1978 Harold Solomon took the title when Corrado Barazzutti became ill and withdrew.

Mayer, ranked No. 15 in the world, may be out for up to two weeks. The injury was initially diagnosed as a severe sprain. Connors, ranked No. 3 in the world, next plays in Hamburg, West Germany, in two weeks.

Connors, who won the Pacific Southwest Open last week in Los Angeles, dominated the field the entire week, losing only one set in four matches.

WCT: McEnroe meets Lendl in championship at Dallas

DALLAS (UPI) — John McEnroe of New York and Czechoslovakia's Ivan Lendl, ranked 1-2 in the world, play tonight in the title match of the 12th World Championship of Tennis Finals, seeking a top prize of $150,000.

McEnroe heads the rankings of the Association of Tennis Players, but had his problems in defeating two opponents before advancing to the championship match.

The defending champion, having trouble getting into the groove after a month-long layoff caused by an ankle injury, seeks to become the first man to win three tournament titles.

Lendl, on the other hand, has been at top form in recent weeks and unleashed a near-flawless game in Saturday's semifinal victory over Vijay Amritraj of India.

McEnroe, 23, and the 22-year-old Lendl will play at 8 p.m. CDT at the 18,000-seat Reunion Arena.

"It would mean something to win for the third time," McEnroe said after Saturday's 6-4, 6-4, 7-6 semifinal win over Eddie Dibbs of Miami.

McEnroe has been bothered by the ankle he injured in early March at the Belgian Open.

"It gets sore and it's taped up," he said. "I do the best I can, but sometimes I just can't get to the shots I think I can."

Lendl has pocketed more than $750,000 since January and although the ATP computer rankings list him as No. 2 in the world, will enter the match as the slight favorite. Lendl has beaten McEnroe the last three times they have met.

Lendl was awesome in destroying Amritraj, racing to a two-set advantage by scores of 6-1, 6-0. Lendl, whipping a powerful serve and ground strokes, closed the match in the third set at 7-5. The match required one hour, 32 minutes, shortest in WCT Finals history.

"I haven't played anyone who hit that hard since (Rod) Laver," Amritraj said. "I was lucky to get out with my life."

Lendl is making only his second appearance in the WCT Finals. Two years ago he was eliminated when losing to Jimmy Connors in two sets. Lendl has won 79 of his last 81 matches and made a shambles of the WCT spring tour, winning his last five tournaments.

New Orleans tourney trimmed to 54 holes

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Faced with unplayable, marsh-like conditions, PGA officials Sunday reluctantly cut the USF&G Golf Classic at rain-plagued Lakewood Country Club from 72 to 54 holes and hoped for one more day of dry weather.

"Tomorrow will be the final round," said tournament spokesman Larry Liddell. "It's been cut to a 54-hole tournament."

He said the $400,000 purse would be cut to $300,000 and the winner's share would drop from $72,000 to $54,000.

Scott Hoch of Raleigh, N.C., held the lead with rounds of 67 and 69 for a two-day total of eight-under-par 136.

Torrential rain suspended play for 30 players in the second round Saturday evening and continued through the night to make the course a virtual marsh, forcing cancellation of the third round on Sunday.

"The sun's out but the course is still waterlogged," Liddell said. "If it dries enough we will start at 6:30 a.m. (MDT) Monday with the 30 players who have to finish the second round, then we will make the cut and start the third round at approximately 8:30."

The event already was a day behind schedule, because of showers that washed out the starting round Thursday, when it was stopped again.

Australian Bob Shearer, the first round leader at 66, posted a round of 71 and dropped back to second place at seven-under-par 137 for the first 36 holes.

"I'm happy to come in with a 71," said Shearer, who finished the back nine in a steady downpour.

Tom Jenkins, who won his only PGA event in a double-round finish at Philadelphia seven years ago, was third at six-under-par for a two-day total of 69-69-138.

LEGAL NOTICE

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA FEDERAL ENERGY REGULATORY COMMISSION
Charles D. Howard
Project No. 6015-000
NOTICE OF APPLICATION FOR PRELIMINARY PERMIT
(March 16, 1982)

Take notice that Charles D. Howard (Applicant) filed on February 22, 1982, an application for preliminary permit (pursuant to the Federal Power Act, 16 U.S.C. paragraphs 791(a)-825(r)) for Project No. 6015 to be known as the Rock Creek Hydro Project located on Rock Creek in Twin Falls, County, Idaho. The application is on file with the Commission and is available for public inspection. Correspondence with the Applicant should be directed to: Mr. Charles D. Howard, 1139 Falls Avenue East, Falls Professional Center, Suite B, Twin Falls, Idaho 83301.

Project Description- The proposed project would consist of: (1) a 5-foot high diversion structure; (2) a 48-inch diameter, 2,600- foot long penstock; (3) a powerplant to contain three generating units with a combined rated capacity of 12,000 kW, operating under a head of 100 feet; (4) a 0.75- mile long transmission line to extend to an existing line. The average annual energy output is estimated at 8,725,000 kWh.

Proposed Scope of Studies under Permit- A preliminary permit, if issued, does not authorize construction. The Applicant seeks issuance of a preliminary permit for a period of 36 months, during which it would conduct engineering, environmental and economic feasibility studies and prepare an application for an FERC license. The estimated costs of conducting these studies and preparing an application for an FERC license is $35,000.

Competing Applications- Anyone desiring to file a competing application for preliminary permit must submit to the Commission, on or before May 25, 1982, the competing application itself, or a notice of intent to file such an application (see: 18 C.F.R. paragraph 4.30 et. seq. (1981); and Docket No. RM81-15, issued October 29, 1981, 48 Fed. Reg. 55245, November 9, 1982.)

The Commission will accept applications for license or exemption from licensing, or a notice of intent to submit such an application in response to this notice. A notice of intent to file an application for license or exemption must be submitted to the Commission on or before May 25, 1982, and should specify the type of application forth coming. Any application for license or exemption from licensing must be filed in accordance with the Commission's regulations (See: 18 C.F.R. paragraph 4.30 et. seq. or paragraph 4.101 et. seq. (1981), as appropriate).

Submission of a timely notice of intent to file an application for preliminary permit, allows an interested person to file an acceptable competing application for preliminary permit no later than July 26, 1982.

Agency Comments- Federal, State, and local agencies are invited to submit comments on the described applications. (A copy of the application may be obtained by agencies directly from the Applicant.) If an agency does not file comments within the time set below, it will be presumed to have no comments.

Comments, Protests, or Petitions to Intervene- Anyone may submit comments, a protest, or a petition to intervene in accordance with the requirements of the Rules of Practice and Procedures, 18 C.F.R. paragraph 1.10 (1980). In determining the appropriate action to take, the Commission will consider all protests or other comments filed, but only those who file a petition to intervene in accordance with the Commission's Rules may become a party to the proceeding. Any comments, protests, or petitions to intervene must be received on or before May 25, 1982.

Filing and Service of Responsive Documents- Any filings must bear in all capital letters the title "COMMENTS" "NOTICE OF INTENT TO FILE COMPETING APPLICANT" "COMPETING APPLICATION", "PROTESTS", or "PETITION TO INTERVENE", as applicable, and the Project Number of this notice. Any of the above named documents must be filed by providing the original and those copies required by the Commission's regulations to: Kenneth F. Plumb, Secretary, Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, 825 North Capitol Street, NE., Washington, D.C. 20426. An additional copy must be sent to: Fred E. Springer, Chief, Applications Branch, Division of Hydropower Licensing, Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, Room 208 RB at the above address. A copy of any notice of intent, competing application, or petition to intervene must also be served upon each representative of the Applicant specified in the first paragraph of this notice.

KENNETH F. PLUMB
Secretary

Opening lead: Diamond queen

It takes method to score 12 tricks and reel in today's shaky slam. Things look easy until one discovers the atrocious trump stack. After that, the winning plan may not be as obvious, but the goal is far from impossible.

East wins his diamond ace and when declarer's king falls, he switches to a club. Declarer sees no reason to finesse and quite properly, goes up with his ace. His plan is to draw trumps, throw one of dummy's clubs on his fifth heart and then score his 12th trick via a club ruff in dummy.

Unfortunately, when declarer plays his ace of trumps, East discards and now it is impossible to run the hearts and discard a club loser from dummy. Is there an alternative way to take an extra trump trick?

Instead of one ruff in dummy, declarer can manage two in his own hand to reach the same total. After the trump ace brings the bad news, declarer leads a heart to dummy's king and ruffs a low diamond with his trump 10. A low trump is led to dummy finessing dummy's seven, and dummy's last diamond is ruffed with declarer's jack. Declarer's last trump is now led to dummy to draw West's remaining trumps and declarer can claim the remaining tricks after he discards his club 10 on dummy's last trump.

When one plan folds, it's nice to have another in reserve.

ANNOUNCING A 5-YEAR FREE RIDE FROM THE TOUGH AMERICANS.

It's American Motors' new 5-year/50,000-mile Buyer Protection Plan 5.

For 5 years, a virtual free ride over the repairs you fear most. Covers every new Tough American Spirit, Concord and Eagle.

Buyer Protection Plan 5 includes:
- First year: full 12-month/12,000-mile warranty.
- Extended service contract coverage of major powertrain and other key components for 5 years or 50,000 miles.
- The only full 5-year No Rust-Thru Warranty in the industry. Possible because of exclusive Ziebart Factory Rust Protection.
- 5-year trip interruption protection. If you're 100 miles or more from home and warranty repairs take overnight, you'll be reimbursed for actual extra lodging and meal expenses up to $150.
- Roadside car assistance.†

*Optional 5-speed stick. Use figures for comparison. Your mileage may vary with speed, weather, trip length. Highway figures lower. See us for warranty and rust program details. Unmuffled exhaust warranted for 12 months/12,000 miles.

From date of delivery or first use. Owner pays first $25 per repair cost of covered components for each repair visit.

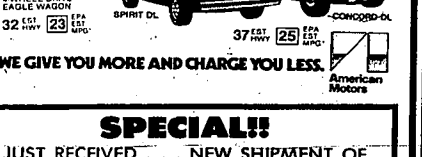

†First year, if dealer has to keep your car overnight for warranty repairs, you'll get a free loaner car. Next 4 years, you'll get $15 a day toward loaner car expense for up to 5 days. Ziebart is a registered trademark of Ziebart International Corporation.

A 5-year free ride and lower prices. Only from the Tough Americans.

We've reduced sticker prices on Spirit, Concord and Eagle by

$500
